Hopes for Early End of Coal Strike Vanish

MANY OPERATORS TO IGNORE PARLEY CALLED BY LEWIS

Settlement Affecting Scattered Mines, However, Is Yet Possible at Cleveland Conference Today.

UNION IS UNDECIDED ON PARTIAL PEACE

Whether Strikers Will Agree to Go Back to Limited Number of Mines Is Unknown.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Cleveland, August 8.—Expectations of a settlement of the soft coal strike on a national scale vanished tonight among union officials and operators here for a joint conference on peace plans with the receipt of reports of the failure of Indiana and Illinois operators' associations to agree to join the conference. The hope, however, was held out that settlement affecting scattered mines in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania, and possibly West Virginia, may result from the conference which reconvenes tomorrow.

President John L. Lewis, of the miners, announced that the conference would re-assemble to open negotiations. The question, however, of whether the miners would be willing to make a wage agreement with the operators now here was undecided, and indications were that a decision would be deferred until after the afternoon meeting tomorrow with the operators, most of whom own mines in Ohio. A few operators also are here from Pennsylvania, Indiana and Illinois.

While the number of operators here was increased today, no official poll had been taken of the coal output controlled by them, and in its absence the union had deferred a decision on whether to proceed with a partial peace program.

Confidence, however, was expressed by some operators and union leaders, that the number of operators willing to make a settlement was sufficient to insure a break in the strike. Some West Virginia operators were expected to join in the conference.

The Indiana operators refused to join the conference and the Illinois operators' committee adjourned until tomorrow without announcing a decision. No word had come from operators in Mississippi soft coal fields, but their attendance was regarded as doubtful. Mr. Lewis declined to comment on the action in Indiana and Illinois. Only informal meetings among both the miners and the operators marked the day and participants said no decisions had been reached affecting the strike.

POTASH AND WHITE ARSENIC ARE ON TARIFF FREE LIST

Washington, August 8.—The senate approved today an increase of three tenths of a cent a pound in the tariff on sugar, rejected a plan for a government bounty of $9,500,000 for domestic potash producers and rescinded its former action in voting an import of two cents a pound on white arsenic. Potash and white arsenic were placed on the free list.

The sugar rate of 2.5 cents a pound was a compromise between the 2.5 cents duty urged by Louisiana cane and western beet sugar producers and the two cents proposed by the house and approved by the finance committee majority. It is three tenths of a cent above the tariff in the emergency act and 1.05 cents above the Underwood act.

The compromise was offered by Senator Smoot, of Utah, ranking republican on the finance committee, and was accepted by the same vote that the senate rejected the 2.5 cents duty, 37 to 35.

U. S. Commissioner Resigns Under Flood Of Prohibition Cases

Atlantic City, N. J., August 8.—John E. Isard, United States commissioner here, resigned today, declaring the great number of prohibition cases brought before him were taking so much time that they were ruining his law business. Hiram Steelman, his predecessor, resigned recently for the same reason.

United States commissionerships are supposed to be part-time jobs and the compensation is fixed accordingly. Mr. Isard said this had been practically a continuous job since he took office in April.

Proud "War Scars" Of Bogus Prince May Be Connubial

Four Women Already Claim Matrimonial Rights to "Henri de Bourbon."

New York, August 8.—Police in New York, Boston and Connecticut are bounding the royal trail of the Bogus Prince Louis Henri de Charleux de Bussigny de Bourbon to determine whether his 14 proudly exhibited "war scars" may be in reality the scars of matrimony.

Four women are reported to have claimed union with this gold braided scion of gentility, who is said to be really Harold Schwarm, an imaginative New Britain, Conn., dishwasher and bowling alley pin-boy.

Schwarm is said to have married Ethel Abetz, of New Britain, six years ago, and to have been divorced for non-support and cruelty.

Miss Catherine Lynn, of Roxbury, Mass., is now in New Britain in an effort to locate Schwarm, who she Continued on page 3, column 6.

THOMPSON AHEAD IN OHIO PRIMARY FOR GOVERNORSHIP

Candidate Backed by Harding Is Leading the Field in Republican Primary Contest.

POMERENE IS AHEAD IN DEMOCRAT VOTING

Incumbent Apparently Nominated for Re-Election as Democrat Senator From Ohio.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Chicago, August 8.—Figures received tonight from today's primaries in Arkansas, Alabama and Ohio showed that leading candidates had a margin which indicated their success if the later vote maintained the earlier trend.

First returns from Arkansas showed that Governor T. C. McRae, who sought endorsement of his administration and strict law enforcement, including Sunday blue laws, was leading by a 3 to 1 vote. Judge E. P. Toney, who had attacked the governor's position, particularly in connection with pardon and parole policies for the democratic gubernatorial nomination. The Ku Klux Klan issue also was brought prominently to the front during the closing days of the campaign.

In Alabama, where Henry Ford's Muscle Shoals offer figured in the campaign, W. W. Brandon, issued an early statement forecasting his nomination for governor, "by a tremendous majority."

With Carmel Thompson leading by a wide margin at midnight for the republican gubernatorial nomination in Ohio, political observers hailed his apparent success as a victory for President Harding's policies and for strict enforcement of the prohibition laws.

The tide of political unrest seen in recent elections in Indiana, Pennsylvania, Iowa and North Dakota seemed to have been checked in the president's home commonwealth. Thompson scored in the early returns a more than 2 to 1 vote over his nearest competitor, C. Homer Durand, beer and light wine candidate, while Congressman S. D. Knight, strongest of the two progressive candidates, was third.

In the Ohio democratic senatorial contest, Senator Pomerene was leading by better than 2 to 1 over his opponent, John T. Lenz, while Congressman S. D. Fess was holding a substantial lead over three opponents in the republican senatorial race with Charles Dick second. Dick had the backing of organized labor.

Candyman Dies.

Raleigh, N. C., August 8.—V. C. Royster, widely-known southern candy manufacturer, is dead here today at the age of 74. Mr. Royster got his business start by selling candies to soldiers of Sherman's army at the close of the war between the states.

TARIFF TO DEFEAT REPUBLICAN PARTY, INSURGENTS THINK

Split in Majority Ranks Looms Over Fordney-McCumber Tariff Measure, Is Report.

SECRET CONFERENCES TO AMEND MEASURE

But, Unless Radical Changes Are Made, Democrats Will Probably Win on Resultant Re-shipment.

Constitution Bureau, Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, August 8.—(By Constitution Bureau Wire.)—Confronted with criticism from two sides, republican leaders of congress, behind closed doors, will attempt to cure the tariff bill of its defects. At least this is the scope of insurgent republicans, who declare the measure will defeat the party and place a democratic majority in the house if drastic changes in the rates are not made.

The two-sided criticism of the republicans comes from the manufacturing interest of the country, who are condemning the delay in enacting tariff legislation, which they claim was one of the major campaign pledges of the party and from the general purpose, which is against the extravagant schedules proposed. The result has been a forced position between the devil and the deep blue sea.

Members of the finance committee are expected to go far towards reducing a number of rates bearing on every-day necessities, but what they fail in, insurgent republicans hope will be accomplished by the house and senate conference. This body, screened from publicity, and protected by the rule that proceedings in the conference room shall not be discussed, will proceed to rewrite the bill and slash rates which many republican senators have predicted would lead the party to revolution.

Will Not Break Delay.

With democratic senators doing all they can to get the bill off the calendar the responsibility for further Continued on page 4, column 5.

FAVOR $9,000,000 ROAD BOND ISSUE

Senate Highway Committee Adopts Jones' Substitute for Mann and Perryman Bond Proposals.

Another step toward a definite plan for a good roads bond issue was made Tuesday afternoon when the senate highway committee adopted as a substitute for pending bills by Representative Mann, of Glynn, and Representative Perryman, of Talbot, a plan by Senator Johnny Jones calling for a bond issue of $9,000,000.

The issue is to be distributed in equal amounts of $3,000,000 each over a three-year period and, together with the federal aid appropriations, will give to Georgia approximately $5,000,000 a year, or $15,000,000 in the next three years, to expend for improved roads.

The substitute by Senator Jones harmonizes the Mann-Perryman plans by fixing the maximum bond issue at $9,000,000. The best features of both plans are incorporated in the substitute bill, which Mr. Mann accepted and announced that he would vigorously support. It is scheduled to be introduced in both houses today.

Other Plans Specified Use.

The bill of Representative Mann calls for a $5,000,000 bond issue to match federal aid funds; provides that, in order to obtain a continuous connecting system, the state highway department must build a road traversing each county through the county seat; limits expenditure to not less than $8,000 per mile, and not more than $18,000 per mile; provides for retirement of principal and interest on the bonds with proceeds from the gas-

As soon as the curtain rose on the scene of a beautiful, nonsmoking, yellow-haired clothing model, divesting herself of a shell-tinted bow-end bed, it became apparent that this year's underwear stylists had appropriated a custom hitherto regarded as one of the inviolable prerequisites of masculinity. #### BROWN DENOUNCES CRITICS IN SENATE IN BITTER TERMS

Commissioner Accuses Absent Senator of 'Knowing Falsehood' in Attacks on Department.

DENUNCIATION COMES AFTER NEAR-ASSAULT

Meeting of Investigating Subcommittee Held to Bring Showdown in Agricultural Department War.

Senator L. C. Brown was bitterly denounced by Commissioner of Agriculture J. J. Brown before a special senate committee Tuesday afternoon, when the senator refused to appear to back up charges he had made of irregularities against the department of agriculture.

Commissioner Brown answered the senator's published charges item by item and scored him as having for the last three years "willfully and knowingly made false statements against the department of agriculture."

Senator Brown is chairman of the special committee before whom the commissioner and his assistants appeared, and he announced Tuesday morning a cancellation of the meeting.

When he was sent for he replied with words that "I have called the meeting off and there is no meeting."

Sensor Brown and Senator L. B. Jackson, another member of the committee, engaged in a near fight immediately following adjournment of the morning session in a difference over the scheduled hearing.

Flat Fight Averted.

The two men nearly came to blows, but bystanders quickly intervened and stopped threatened physical violence. The committee is composed of three members, and Tuesday afternoon Senators Jackson and Williams, disregarding the chairman's inclination, held a session they said to bring a "show down" from both sides.

Representative Zach Arnold, of Clay, who has been leading an attack in the house against the agricultural department, was present and interrogated the commissioner with numerous questions.

Two weeks ago, upon request in a resolution by Senator Brown, the senate authorized the special committee to check up on reports which the body had ordered each state department to submit.

The senator prepared a minority report following an investigation in which he charged that the department of agriculture is maintaining a surplus of oil inspectors; that J. W. Abitor, an oil inspector for the department at Savannah, paid $1,134 for his appointment; that J. J. Hicks, assistant commissioner of agriculture, drew various sums totaling $125 as traveling expenses and the report of the department shows him credited with an expense account of only

He replied that it would be several days before he would have his campaign policies mapped out and he would make known his intentions later.

Help In Safety Week.

George A. Diebert, secretary of the Citizens' Safety association, asked the commission for co-operation of the police department in a movement by local civic organizations recently to cut-fail accidents and stimulate interest in safety first methods in Atlanta.

Mr. Diebert declared the movement would be introduced into the public schools of the city and precautionary methods taught children in crossing streets, and a general effort to educate the public in adhering to the traffic ordinances. A "Safety week," lasting from September 17 to 23 will feature the campaign.

Accuses Doctor Of Causing Wife To Ask Divorce

Man Says Wife Was Doped and Asks Damages From Doctor.

Dr. W. F. Cross, East Point physician, and Mrs. Lillian Cross, his wife, were defendants Tuesday in a sensational damage suit filed by J. H. Woolum, of East Point, an employee of the American Railway Express company, who alleged that the doctor and his wife had conspired to cause a separation between Mrs. Woolum and himself and had placed Mrs. Woolum under the influence of ether and induced her to file suit for divorce.

The suit, asking for $30,000 damages, was filed Monday through attorney Frank P. Stockton, and was given to the sheriff's office Tuesday for service.

Woolum also charges the physician and his wife with circulating slanderous reports concerning him. He alleges that when his wife recovered from the effects of the drug she immediately instructed her attorney to withdraw the divorce suit.

Semi-Conscious 15 Days.

According to Woolum, Dr. Cross and his wife, on July 20, persuaded Mrs. Woolum to take a dose of liquid labeled "nerve tonic," which in reality, he claims, was ether. Mrs. Woolum lapsed into unconsciousness for about five minutes and for fifteen days thereafter was in a semi-conscious or dazed condition.

After the first dose she repeatedly took doses until July 20 at the physician's instruction, he alleges.

While under the influence of the ether, it is charged, the defendants, "through mental suggestion or through some hypnotic influence," exerted on Mrs. Woolum, she was caused to

"PRESIDENT CUT OFF HAND SUPPORTING HIM"

Mine and Rail Executives, Desiring Finish Fight With Strikers, Counted on Harding's Backing.

BY ROBERT J. BENDER.
United News Staff Correspondent.
(Copyright, 1922, for The Constitution.)

Washington, August 8.—When President Harding submitted his basis for settling the railroad strike he dumfounded the great financial interests of the east, predominantly republican, party leaders in and out of congress, and some of the most influential republican newspapers along the eastern seaboard. From the standpoint of politics the situation now created contains vast and interesting possibilities.

The president's course in the rail matter came as a climax to a long campaign that had been going forward, particularly in the east, against congress. This campaign has had as its corollary an equally insistent demand by big financial leaders to have Harding take the leadership of affairs. It dates back to the time when congress refused to eliminate, but voted instead, for high surtaxes in the revenue bill.

In the great industrial crisis precipitated by the rail and mine strikes, a situation was created for the first time, wherein Harding and Harding alone was responsible for a settlement. His was the leadership, and his alone, that would direct the way toward peace.

Executives' Deal

In this situation, the developed a well-defined determination on the part of both rail and mine executives to carry through their fight with labor to a finish. From all indications, it appeared that they felt their purpose could be launched with half of congress away, the other half in seclusion over the tariff bill and the president alone handling the strikes with little likelihood of interference.

When the president told the mine operators to go ahead and attempt production of coal, despite the strike, there was quiet rejoicing among those who wished this course, above all others, to be his decision. Then the rail strike became menacing.

Rail executives came to Washington. They were met and conferred with by a committee of spokesmen for the president, seeking information on the rail situation for the nation's executive. At that meeting, exchanges something like this are said to have occurred:

153,000 New Workers.

"How many men went out on strike?" the rail chiefs were asked.

"About 375,000—Jewell claims 400,000 but that number probably includes some of the unimportant lines," was the reply.

"How many men have you employed since the strike?" was another question.

"About 138,000 throughout the country," was the reply after a careful check among the executives.

"How many remained at work?"

"About 40,000."

"How is your service?"

"Practically normal as to freight and through passenger trains. About eight per cent below normal in local train service," was the answer.

"How long can you operate satisfactorily with the reduced force?" was the final question.

"About 90 days—but by that time we figure our plans for mobilizing skilled shovemen will have brought our forces back to normal."

President Doubts.

This information was carried to the president. To the consternation

SOUTHERN RAILROAD OFFER IS REJECTED

Strikers Say Only National Settlement Is Acceptable—Road Says Consideration for Strikers Is Over.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Washington, August 8.—President Harding has asked congressional leaders, in view of the menacing industrial situation arising from coal and rail strikes, to hold the house, now in recess, continuously in session, along with the senate, after the house reconvenes next Tuesday.

The prospect was that, failing early settlement of the labor controversies, the administration might call for legislative action to enable the government to cope with conditions.

Meanwhile, leaders of union transportation organizations began to gather here for conferences to determine the response to be made to President Harding's latest offer of a settlement basis for the shovemen's strike, and to determine, according to statements, what joint or co-operative action labor forces shall take in case the offer is rejected.

Southern Parley Falls.

B. M. Jewell, chairman of the officers of the striking unions, declared he had received hundreds of telegrams today from shovemen's locals, "telling us to reject the president's offer and not a single one asking its acceptance."

Separate conferences between Southern railway officials and representatives of its striking shovemen broke up finally today when the men declared only a national settlement could be accepted, even though the railroad conceded seniority rights. Fairfax Harrison, president of the road, in a general notice to all of its employees, said that the company considered it had "more than fulfilled its obligations to its striking employees," and that its duty was now for unimpairment transportation service. "This we will perform," he declared.

FOR FULL SERVICE, SOUTHERN APPEALS

After Rejection of Peace Offer From Road, Harrison Declares "Duty to Strikers Fulfilled."

Washington, August 8.—Fairfax Harrison, president of the Southern railway, appealed to all employees of the railroad system today to assist the management in performing its duty to the public and the company. The railroad executives declared the Southern railway had "more than fulfilled" its duty to striking shovemen by endeavoring to get them to resume work under terms of President Harding's strike settlement offer, which were rejected by the shovemen's committee today.

In rejecting the offer the shovemen's representatives told the railway executives in conference here that the strike was national and must be settled nationally. The conference was called at the request of Vice President Miller of the Southern railway and the shovemen were informed that the Southern railway and the Mobile and Ohio were willing to agree to a strike settlement under President Harding's terms which left seniority unimpaired until the railroad labor board acted.

Mr. Harrison's statement addressed "to all the employees of Southern railway system" follows:

Text of Statement.

"I have delayed communication with you, hoping that I could finally report that our shovemen had returned unimpaired to their former position."

INCOME TAX BILL PASSED BY HOUSE VOTE OF 141 TO 48

Two-Thirds Majority, With Three Votes to Spare, Is Ballot After All-Day Session.

EFFORTS TO DESTROY EFFECTIVENESS LOST

If Finally Written Into Constitution, Will Add $2,500,000 to State Income, Author Claims.

By a vote of 141 to 48 the house Tuesday afternoon passed the Carwell income tax bill after a long session of five hours in which more than half a dozen amendments to the measure were defeated and two important amendments adopted. The bill received three more votes than was needed to obtain a constitutional two-thirds majority. It was immediately transmitted to the senate. Representative George Carwell, who framed the measure and who led the long fight for the adoption, issued a statement Tuesday night declaring the bill would bring in a net increase of $2,500,000 in the state's annual income. All members of the Fulton delegation voted against the bill.

As passed in substitute form and as amended, the bill imposes a tax of 3 per cent on net incomes. The ad valorem tax is reduced from 5 mills to 4 mills and is allowed as an exemption on the income tax. Incomes of single persons will, in addition, carry $1,000 exemptions and of married persons or heads of families exemptions of $2,500 with an additional exemption of $200 for each minor or dependent member of the family. The bill is a constitutional amendment and if passed by the senate must be submitted to the people for ratification.

Third Tax Measure.

With the passage of the income tax bill Tuesday and the passage of the tax equalization law repeal bill last week, the way is now cleared for a consideration of a third phase of the state's taxing problem which will develop in the house Wednesday when the Arnold classification of property tax measure comes up for passage.

It is virtually certain that the rules committee will bring out this bill early in the Wednesday session. The luxury tax bill and other tax bills follow the classification measure in order as soon as they can be reached. Representative Carwell has been at work for months preparing the measure which was passed Tuesday. He served as chairman of the special tax committee which met several times during the legislative recess and has been working for weeks on the present bill.

"As passed by the house Tuesday the bill will bring in additional revenues amounting to $3,500,000 a year, and deducting about $1,000,000 which will be lost through the reduction of the ad valorem tax from 5 mills to 4 mills, the net increase will be about $2,500,000, according to conservative estimate," Mr. Carwell said. "In my opinion the adoption of this system of taxation is a great forward step and if passed by the senate I feel sure it will be ratified by the people," he declared.

Fight Lasted All Day.

The fight over the income tax bill was the only outstanding feature of the house session Tuesday. The bill was taken up early in the session and the debate lasted all day. More than a score of members made speeches on the bill and when a yeas and nays roll call was in progress, upwards of fifty took advantage of their three minutes to explain their votes, dragging out the session until the afternoon. Because of the length of the session no afternoon meeting of the house was held.

The following amendments to the income tax bill were adopted: By Rutherford, of Monroe—To amend by adding the following to section 2: "The exemptions shall be as follows: $1,000 for each single person, or in case of a head of a family or a married person living with husband or wife, a personal exemption of $2,500, and $200 additional for each minor or dependent."

By Lankford, of Toombs, and Smith, of Meriwether—Amend the bill as follows: "And the amount paid to the state as ad valorem tax is hereby reduced by an exemption."

The Rutherford amendment follows close along the lines of the federal income tax amendment by providing exemptions. The Lankford amendment gives the taxpayer credit for whatever tax he might have paid under the ad valorem system on what he would have to pay under the income tax system.

Amendments Defeated. Several amendments were voted down by the house. Representative Davis, of Oglethorpe, introduced an amendment reducing the ad valorem tax from five mills to three mills, which was defeated. Representative Quincy offered an amendment reducing it to two mills, which also was defeated. Representative Johnson, of Barlow, fixed exemptions of personal property at $500, which was defeated. Representative Mundy, of Polk, and Smith, of Meriwether, introduced an amendment exempting from income tax property on which ad valorem tax had been paid. This also was defeated. Representative Carwell, of Fulton, offered an amendment reducing the percentage of income tax from 3 per cent to 2 per cent, which was defeated.

Representative Carwell declared these amendments would defeat the purpose of the bill, if passed, and would make the bill virtually useless as an income product.

Among those who took part in the debate were Representatives Carwell, of Wilkinson; Lankford, of Toombs; Culpepper, of Fayette; McClure, of Walker; Rutherford, of Monroe; Mundy, of Polk; Moye, of Randolph; Brownlee, of Elbert; Greene, of Jones; Henderson, of White; Dykes, of Dooly; Whitaker, of Lowndes; Smith, of Meriwether, and Voele, of Camden.

The original bill prepared by Representative Carwell was known as house bill No. 205. Two substitutes were offered to the bill and the first was voted down by overwhelming votes. The second substitute was framed by Mr. Carwell and contained a few changes from the regular bill which he deemed necessary. The substitute, with the two amendments, was finally adopted by a vote of 141 to 48.

How They Voted.

The aye and nay vote on the bill was announced by the clerk of the house as follows: Ayes—Anderson, Arnold, Atkinson, Baldwin, Beck, Bieckley, Bloodworth, Boswell, Bowden, Boyett, Braddy, Branch, Brannen, Brown, of Emanuel; Bush, Byrd, of Crisp; Camp, Carr, Carswell, Childs, Clark, of Webster; Clifton, Collier, Corbett, Cowart, Culpepper, Daniel, of Heard; Davis, of Floyd; Davis, of Oglethorpe; DeFoor, DeLaPerriere, Dickerson, Dixon, Dobbs, DuBose, Dudley, Dykes, Ennis, Evans, Fletcher, Fulson, Foy, Grant, Gretham, Griffin, Griffith, Greene, Groves, Gunnel, Haddock, Hamilton, Harris, Hatcher, of Burke; Hawkins, Henderson, Herring, Hillhouse, Hines, of Decatur; Hines, of Sumter; Hodges, Holland, Horne, Houser, Howard, of Forsyth; Howard, of Screven; Hufstetter, Hullender, Hunter, Hyman, Jackson, Johnson, of Barlow; Johnson, of Pickens; Keith, Kennedy, King, of Wilcox; Kittrell, Knight, Lankford, of Toombs; Lewis, Logan, Luke, McClure, McClellan, McMichael, Manning, Mason, Mason, Mayo, Miles, Mixon, Moore, of Appling; Neal, of Union; Nichols, Owen, Parrish, Patten, Penland, Peterson, Phillips, of Jasper; Pruett, Ramsey, Reagan, Reville, Robinson, Russell, Rutherford, Salmon, Sapp, Shaglesford, Sibley, Singletary, Smith, of Bryan; Smith, of Carroll; Smith, of Harrison; Steele, Stone, Stovall, Sumner, of Johnson; Sumner, of Wheeler; Swift, Swindle, Tatum, Tyson, Valentine, Van Landingham, Van Zandt, Walker, Wall, Watkins, War, Weston, Whitaker, of Lowndes; Whitworth, Williams, of Harris; Wimberly, Winship, Wood, Woodward, Woodward, Wynne, Total, 141.

HARDING MAY ASK CONGRESS ACTION

Congress might be asked to authorize resumption of federal control over the railroad systems should President Harding find it impossible to terminate the strike satisfactorily, with further possibility that direct legislation amending the transportation act might be sought to make railroad labor board decisions in wage matters binding.

Congress May Act. There was also a proposal in some quarters that jurisdiction might be given the board by law over differences which arise during the strike, and did the present seniority issue. Cabinet members considered it likely that the situation might be put up to congress in a special presidential message should difficulties continue to multiply, but at the white house it was said the president would not anticipate his course.

Mr. Jewell and W. H. Johnston, president of the machinists' association, in statements today, indicated all the railroad union heads, called to meet Friday, would pass on the answers. Mr. Johnston continued to "would take the railroads a year to get their equipment back into shape, if the strike should stop right now."

They further charged that strikebreakers were being hired in Europe, particularly England, by some of the roads, naming the Chesapeake & Ohio as one such road.

Men From Britain. "We found at Huntington, W. Va., men who had been brought over for the purpose," Mr. Johnston asserted, "and we have called British labor organizations asking them to spread the knowledge of these American advertisements and intend also to cite the cases to the immigration authorities as violation of the contract labor laws."

GOMERS WANTS WRECKED PROBED. Washington, August 8.—(By the Associated Press.)—The American Federation of Labor, in a statement today declared there should be inquiry by public officials "not under the influence of the railroad authorities" in every case of a railroad accident, in view of what he described as "the large number of apparently authentic statements charging a deplorable condition in railroad equipment."

Mr. Gompers declared reports of railroad wrecks had been frequent recently and cited the Missouri Pacific wreck at Sulphur Springs, Mo., in which many persons were killed.

DENIES FAULT LIES IN EQUIPMENT. St. Louis, August 8.—(By the Associated Press.)—Officials of railroads having general offices in St. Louis, today emphatically denied the statement of Mr. Gompers that recent railroad accidents may have been due to defective equipment.

Speaking for the St. Louis and San Francisco, J. M. McLaughlin, stated, that not since the strike began, has a single accident on the road been attributable to defective equipment.

Mr. Kurn also directed attention to the fact that the interstate commerce commission investigates railroad accidents in which there was loss of life.

CENTRAL SHOPS HALF FILLED. Macon, Ga., August 8.—(Special.) Fifty per cent of the vacancies in the Central of Georgia railroad shops in this city caused by the strike have been filled, according to officials of the road, who say that they expect to have the shops back on a normal basis within a few days. At the same time it is announced that only skilled workmen are being employed.

"Pickets continued on duty here today, but the situation was quiet," The United States marshal's office announced that it had not been instructed by Judge Barrett to prevent the shops from being opened. The temporary restraining order signed by Judge Barrett in August last Saturday.

A. C. L. RAPIDLY FILLING SHOP FORCES. Wilmington, N. C., August 8.—(Special.)—More than 100 skilled men have been picked up in the last four days at many points on the Atlantic Coast Line, according to a statement issued today by P. R. Albright, general manager of the system, which follows:

"The Atlantic Coast Line desires the public to know the true conditions existing today over its entire system and through the loyalty of those who continue at work and others who have entered its service, the trains are moving currently and on schedule. The force of laborers in and around all shops is being rapidly recruited. These forces are assigned to heavy repair work."

SEABOARD RESUMES TRAIN SERVICE. The Seaboard Air Line announced Tuesday that train No. 7 and 8 between Birmingham and Atlanta, which were taken off to conserve fuel during the strike, will be restored to service. The train forebushadows a complete restoration of the Atlanta service. The trains taken off are local. It was also declared that freight picked up by the line in July amounted to 38.2 per cent increase over that handled in June. According to officials of the line, little trouble has been experienced in handling either freight or passengers. Shop forces in the local shops of the Seaboard now total about 50 per cent of the normal number, it is said.

ALLEGED STRIKERS INDICTED IN COLUMBUS. Columbus, Ga., August 8.—Four men, said by police to be striking shopmen, were indicted by the county grand jury here today on charges of assault with intent to murder in connection with an attack recently on five negro employees of the Central of Georgia railroad shops here.

The men, H. Smith, J. N. Hancock, C. E. Tyner and J. D. Milford, were released in bail of $200 for trial August 15.

FOR FULL SERVICE, SOUTHERN APPEALS

Striving for this result, no conditions have been created to prevent the return of our men with seniority rights unimpaired but the door has been, and now is, open and unobstructed to them.

"On August 1 your shopcrafts committee was invited to confer with our officials to consider the return of our men upon the terms proposed by the president on July 31 and subsequently accepted by the national representatives of such crafts. After delaying answer until August 5, the committee agreed to meet our officials on August 5, on which day they asked postponement to August 7, and then asked further postponement to today. Though recognize the efforts of this company in the protection of the seniority of our men, we are told this morning by your committee that they will make no adjustment with Southern railway system as the strike is national and must be settled nationally."

"Our duty is to our employees, the public and the company; the duty to our striking employees we have more than fulfilled, and I now call upon you, whatever is your occupation, to assist in the efforts in performing its duty also to the public and to the company. This obligation calls for unimpaired transportation service and this we will perform."

Mr. Miller, vice president in charge of operation for the Southern, had nothing to add to Mr. Harrison's message when asked if the railroad now intended to employ new men and attempt to break the strike. The Southern, acting under the association of railway executives, accepted President Harding's original offer to settle the strike by giving all strikers seniority rights on their return. During the course of the controversy, it has hired no new men, and has made no attempts to break the strike.

of some of his spokesmen, he is said to have discounted much of its optimistic tone by advising he had received from Bert M. Jewell, leader of the shopmen, who has conferred with him on reports as compiled by the workers.

There followed conferences between the president and the executives on the one hand and between the president and the shopmen on the other. Meantime he wrote a telegram to J. Cleve Dean, a railway employees' leader.

publicly man. It was forceful, sharp and brought cheers from those elements in the railroad world demanding a finish fight.

The next word from the president, however, was entirely different in tone. It was the basis of compromise and settlement of the rail strike, eminently fair, from the workers' viewpoint, and forthwith accepted by the striking shopmen.

There followed rumors that the president, in his informal conversations with the rail executives, had promised one thing but that his proposal embodied another. This was later emphatically and somewhat heatedly denied at the white house. In all events, rail executives overwhelmingly rejected the proposal. Wall Street condemned it and praised the executives and the leading republican newspapers along the eastern seaboard generally joined in the chorus of praise for the rail heads and abuse of the proposal. As one republican leader here expressed this reaction to the writer, "the president, without warning, went over bag and baggage to Sam Gompers—and cut off the hand that was supporting him."

The "hand" in question was this powerful eastern influence which had long berated congress and demanded that Harding, personally, lead. The origin of this campaign and the complete changes in political plans by party leaders that it has effected will be reported in later stories.

Cotton Pickin' Time. Waynesboro, Ga., August 8.—(Special.)—Cotton picking has begun. Two bales were brought to town Saturday. It is thought now that the cotton crop of the county will be better than that of last year. The farmers are hopeful.

CAPITAL REMOVAL MOVEMENT LOSES

Issue Is Killed for Present Session by Decisive Vote of State Senate Tuesday.

Following heated debate on the capital removal bill in the senate Tuesday morning, the measure was decisively beaten by the vote of 28 to 16. It came up on a motion by the senator from the third to disagree with the report of the constitutional amendments committee, which recommended that the bill do not pass after a hearing held last week.

Further agitation for the removal of the capital from Atlanta to Macon is dead for this session. Those voting to sustain the unfavorable report of the committee were Senators Akin, Bellah, Bond, Boykin, Brown, Campbell, Childs, Colman, Fleming, of the eighth; Foy, Haralson, Hutchins, Johns, Jones, of the sixth; Kinney, Manson, Mills, Nix, Palmour, Peacock, Pope, Richards, Snow, Tarpley, Walker, Weaver, Williams—28.

Those voting against the report were Senators Cone, Colson, Davidson, Ellis, Golucke, Hollingsworth, Hunt, Jackson, Jones, of the thirty-seventh; Lassiter, Sheffield, Taylor, Thomas, Thorpe, Wohlwender, Womble—16.

County Seat Fight. At the hour of adjourning the morning session at 1 o'clock the senate was debating another "capital removal" issue, a warm local fight between rival Calhoun county towns to be designated as the county seat.

The pending bill, which had passed the house, provides for removal of the county seat from Morgan to Arlington, and the people of Calhoun have endorsed the proposal by a two-thirds vote. Senator Sheffield, representative from the district embracing Calhoun, is opposed to the change and made a bitter speech against it. Several senators joined in the debate for or against the bill.

At the afternoon session the favorable report of the committee was disagreed to by the vote of 24 to 18 and Morgan will remain the county seat.

The senator from the third opened argument to remove the capital to Macon. He challenged the senate to submit the question to the vote of the people, charging that the bill had been "pigeon-holed" from year to year by its opponents, who feared to let the voters express their choice on the matter at the ballot box.

Members, among them Senators Nix, Johns, Bellah, Manson, Snow and Campbell, replied, declaring that there is no sentiment in Georgia for capital removal, and arguing that the bill was brought up for the purpose of killing time and blocking important pending legislation, including the tax equalization repeal and the port bill.

Jones Enters Debate. Senator Johnny Jones, in his speech urging that the capital be taken away from Atlanta, asserted that "nobody from Asia to the Ku Klux Klan can intimidate me."

He declared that "lobbyists and slimy vipers" had undertaken this method within the past few days. "Since some happened to be in the past few days," he said, "I am getting dangerously near favoring removal of the capital anywhere else. Only a few days ago these slimy vipers actually stormed a committee meeting in this capitol."

Senators Wohlwender and Womble spoke in support of the measure and Wohlwender issued a warning that "no more money will ever be spent on this capitol until the people are allowed to vote on the issue of removal."

The senate voted at the morning session to accept an invitation to attend a barbecue Thursday at 1 o'clock given by the Atlanta Bar association at the Burns club.

Automobiles will be in waiting at the Hunter street entrance to the capitol to take the members to the club. Attorney E. E. Pomeroy is president of the bar association.

FORMER ATLANTAN DIES IN CAROLINA

W. Ed Dillard, of Sylva, N. C., former Atlantan and a brother of R. M. Dillard, of 271 East Lake drive, died, July 24, at Sylva, according to information received in Atlanta yesterday.

He is survived by his widow and a small child, both of whom are in Atlanta; by his mother, Mrs. T. I. Dillard, of Sylva; seven brothers, Victor Dillard, of Kings Mountain, N. C.; J. L. and Lyndon Dillard, Raleigh; Louis, Charles, R. M. and Gerson, of Camp Benning; two sisters, Mrs. H. Ed Dillard and Miss Cora Dillard, of Sylva.

WATKINS TO RETAIN SEAT IN COUNCIL

A letter was read in council Monday from Councilman Edgar Watkins, representative from the eighth ward, that he would continue to serve in that body until his term of office expired.

Mr. Watkins recently intimated that he would resign from council before his term expired. When his letter was read, general council accorded him a rising vote of appreciation in honor of his good work as a member of that body.

DR. J. T. HOLBROOK IS BURIED TUESDAY

Carnesville, Ga., August 8.—(Special.)—Dr. J. T. Holbrook, civil war hero, who died Monday at his home at Bold Springs cemetery Tuesday. Serving as secretary to Colonel W. J. Millican in company B, 15th Georgia regiment, it was Dr. Holbrook who bore the picturesque leader of the "Tugalo Blues" from the field when the latter was mortally wounded. After the war he studied medicine and was for a number of years a prominent physician. Several years ago he represented Franklin county in the state legislature.

He is survived by his widow, four sons, Paschel, Nathan, William and

D. Holbrook; five daughters, Mrs. E. T. Smith, of Carnesville, and Misses Mary, Elizabeth, Anna and Gladys Holbrook, and one brother, P. C. Holbrook, of Ashland.

Car Fare Reduction For School Pupils To Be Argued Today

The state railroad commission will hear the petition for three and one-half cent street car fare for school children at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning. It was announced Tuesday by W. W. Gaines, president of the board of education.

The board requests that all persons favoring the reduction be present at the hearing of the railroad commission in the state capitol.

line tax and the sale of automobile tax license. Representative Perryman's plan calls for a "usable" system of highways, not necessarily paved, but well graded, well drained, well soiled or graveled and well bridged. His plan contemplates the issue of $9,000,000 of non-interest bearing certificates or discount notes at the rate of $10,000,000 per annum, and he has figured out in specific detail the work that would be performed and the interest that would accrue to the state. Senator Jones stated that it was not his idea to build roads and saddle debts on the people of Georgia before the plans were seen in process of development, and that future legislatures would be in position to meet any new angles in working out the highway scheme. His plan of $3,000,000 per annum meets the federal aid fund for three years, and that is all that will be taken care of until these federal aid funds are increased or extended.

Senator Jones' plan does not change in any way the workings of the Mann-Perryman plan, except in the amount of bond issue.

claims wood and won her with a story of how he received his wounds while a member of the Russian czar's staff and personal crony of the czar. A few weeks after their marriage he vanished into royal ether and next appeared, she says, as the husband of a Tannin nurse.

"Prince Henri's" fourth-stride into matrimony is said to have taken place in New York, where in addition to parading 87th avenue in regalia that would make a hotel doorman blush, he "adopted" John D. Rockefeller as his father and John Jacob Astor as his uncle.

His new "princess" was rumored to have won his majestic favor as the daughter of a Brooklyn millionaire, but the illusion was shattered when she was compelled to support the melange by hard work as an ordinary typist. Now the uptown apartment where his highness held court is deserted, and a trio of filled milk bottles stand sentry at the dumb waiter. Not only the prince but his latest affinity has disappeared.

Report has it that de Bourbon was seen immaculately groomed, taking his customary stroll down "Millionaire's Row" Tuesday, but at the approach of an acquaintance he sought the shelter of the nearest alley. This report, however, was not confirmed by the police.

SHORTAGE CHARGED TO TAX COLLECTOR

Americus, Ga., August 8.—(Special.)—Alleging that he has failed properly to account for $3,500 of school fund money collected by him, the commissioners of Webster county have issued an execution against H. B. Reeves, county tax collector, at Preston, for that amount. The process was placed in the hands of Sheriff C. M. Christian, for service on Reeves today.

The sheriff said he expected to levy on certain property belonging to Reeves immediately, and that it was anticipated a settlement of the case would be effected within a few days.

The execution was issued by the commissioners after they had consulted with J. E. Sheppard, an Americus attorney, who assisted in drafting the paper, now in Sheriff Christian's hands.

According to information here, certain discrepancies were discovered in Reeves' accounts covering local school funds, and it is charged that the tax collector had since failed properly to account for funds alleged to be due the county.

Reeves, who is prominent in Preston, has been tax collector of Webster county for six years. He said this afternoon that he settled last with the county on the first Tuesday in June, at which time there was a difference on accounts of approximately $200, due to the failure of collecting officers accurately to figure interest, etc. This was merely a matter of bookkeeping, that could easily be straightened out, he said.

There have been numerous partial payments of taxes throughout the county, according to Reeves, these having been accepted because of scarcity of money, and in accordance with custom as well. Included in past due and uncollected taxes, Reeves says, are amounts due during both 1920 and 1921, which has caused some stringency in the various county departments.

The school money alleged to be unaccounted for, has all been properly handled, the collector asserts, and if the various trustees have been unable to secure funds derived from special school tax levies, it is because these have either not yet been collected, or are yet in the hands of bailiffs and other officers having filed issued by the tax collector and collected by them, but not turned over to the collector.

The school authorities, it appears, are this year demanding interest in amounts due them from December 20, 1921, whereas in former years all interests received by the collector has been remitted to the state and county authorities, and this demand, it is alleged, had much to do with the issue.

ACQUITS POLICEMAN WHO SLEW SPEEDER

Columbus, Ga., August 8.—(Special.)—The grand jury today returned a no bill in the case of J. B. Miller, policeman who shot and killed John Aeschbacher, of Phoenix City.

The officer was trying to stop a car in which Aeschbacher and several other young men were speeding. He fired at the tires of the car and the bullet struck one of the occupants of the automobile.

COMMISSIONER BROWN DENOUNCES CRITICS

$8.40, and that over $20,000 was wasted on porter and office boy hire.

In reply Commissioner Brown said that it was utterly impossible to conduct thorough and efficient inspection of the large quantities of gasoline received in Atlanta, Savannah, Augusta and Macon with only one inspector for each city. He said that an average of forty tank cars of gasoline a day come into Atlanta and that he has appointed four inspectors for this city and two each for the other cities in order that the consuming public might be fully protected and receive the service the state is supposed to give.

Replying to the charge that Abner bought an inspectorship at Savannah for $1,134, he explained that F. O. Miller, former inspector in that city, ceased to make reports and retained in his possession approximately $1,100. He stated that he finally received a check from Miller for the full amount due the state and appointed Abner in his place, but did not receive one penny from him or any one else in return for the office.

Relative to the $20,000 for porters and office boys, he showed that total expenditure for services of this sort was $2,015.58. Senator Brown said Tuesday that his report on office help contained a stenographic error and he intended it to read $2,916.

Explaining the traveling expense charge against J. J. Hicks, requisitions approved in the regular way were presented to show that there was no misuse of funds by the assistant commissioner of agriculture.

From Audited Report.

The figures offered the committee covering the department's operation were from an audited report of the office by C. J. Metz company, certified public accountants.

At the end of the hearing Senator Jackson said the committee would file with the senate a report containing the exact information brought out at the hearing, which was taken down by a shorthand stenographer.

Added to Charges.

In the senate Tuesday morning Senator Brown supplemented his previous charges with a copy of a letter from Fertilizer Inspector J. J. Marchant to Commissioner Brown, stating that an employee of the department had promised that Brown would give him (Marchant) an extra month's pay if he would work for the commissioner's re-election in Worth, Cook and Colquitt counties, and submitted his resignation.

Following the session's adjournment Senator Jackson urged Senator Brown not to cancel the scheduled date of the special committee meeting. The senator refused to convene the committee on the ground that he wished to await additional information relative to the department before calling the committee together.

"We'll skin you when you come on the floor of the senate," warned Jackson. This brought a retort from Brown. The two men exchanged other repartee which grew warmer until Brown replied: "D—n you, skin me if you can."

"You can curse me," cried Jackson, and started for the senator, who also advanced. Before they could come to blows colleagues seized them and prevented the fight. The outbreak took place just after adjournment of the senate.

The letter to Commissioner Brown from J. J. Marchant, which Senator Brown obtained unanimous consent to read in the senate Tuesday morning, follows in part:

Letter of Marchant.

"Some weeks ago Mr. James M. Morgan, an employee of the state department of agriculture and connected with the state bureau of markets, called upon me to organize for you Colquitt, Worth and Cook counties, about 15, and that the chief executive would not stand for representatives to immediately launch a period of three-day recesses, as was planned.

But for this, congressmen returning from their six-weeks' vacation hoping that the senate would have the tariff bill ready might as well have stayed away. The measure will not be in shape for conference work.

What'll They Do?

And what the returning statesmen will do in the meantime to employ their idle hours—provided the president does not propose industrial legislation—is a question. despise, hate and loathe Woolum, and was led to believe that she was leading a miserable life with her husband, and that he did not love her as he should.

She was convinced, it is alleged, that she wanted a divorce from her husband and that she could secure money from Woolum and enjoy luxuries of life which were being denied her.

An attorney was employed by the defendants, it was alleged, and through him Mrs. Woolum filed the divorce suit. She also asked for alimony, and enjoined Woolum from going to his home.

She Withdraws Suit.

On July 20, the petition of Woolum states, when the supply of ether furnished his wife was practically exhausted, she was told of the action she had taken against her husband. As the effects of the drug began to wear off, she began to realize what she had done, it is said, and immediately withdrew her suit.

Woolum alleged that he had been humiliated and embarrassed to such an extent that the tension of his mind had mentally ruined his health and that his home had been disrupted.

In setting forth his claim for damages he said that he will not only find it necessary to place his wife in a sanitarium in order for her to permanently recover from the effects of the ether, but that he will be forced to employ someone to care for his two small children.

The suit contains two counts, the first containing the charge that Dr. Cross and his wife deliberately conspired to separate them, and the second alleging that they issued slanderous statements.

Woolum filed damage suits for $10,000 each on August 1 against three well-known East Point men, whom he accused of making slanderous remarks concerning him.

TARIFF TO DEFEAT REPUBLICAN PARTY

delay has been put squarely up to the majority. Any attempt to hold final adjustment over until after the November elections will be exposed, both democrats and insurgent republicans assert. These members are determined that the public shall have an opportunity to express sentiment on the legislation while the subject is fresh, and not two years hence when the matter will have been forgotten, perhaps.

There has been much talk at the capital lately of a presidential veto of the bill unless certain changes were effected. President Harding has been urged to veto the measure by a representative number of party followers, but due to his reluctance to offer any final opposition there is little hope of such a step at this time. In view of the fact that the tariff has not yet received its full stage consideration, to say nothing of the revised rates expected from the conference, requests for a veto are looked upon as significant, and may prove the forerunners of additional steps in this direction later on.

Another significant fact in this connection is recalled in the split between the white house and congress over the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill. President Taft once denounced the wool schedules of that measure, describing them as "absolutely indefensible," and caused a division in the republican ranks for that year. President Harding, it is said, might be forced to take a like position, in view of the fact that the wool schedules of the Fordney-McCumber bill are higher than those of the Payne-Aldrich measure.

There is yet another phase of the criticism republicans are facing. They are forced to push through the measure because of a desire not to repudiate the work of the finance committee, which would be the interpretation, given if actions are made too conspicuous.

To do this, in full view of the public, would not be in the practice of politicians. To do it behind closed doors of a conference room and then to report the bill as a whole with the certainty that the public would not be able to understand what had happened, is the proper political procedure. In its last analysis the act will be mild rather than strong insur-

The legislative program of congress appears to be about the same, unless the president plans drastic recommendations in the way of industrial laws. This was indicated to some degree today in his conference with newspaper men when the information was given out that members of the lower house would be expected in full attendance after August 15, and that the chief executive would not stand for representatives to immediately launch a period of three-day recesses, as was planned.

But for this, congressmen returning from their six-weeks' vacation hoping that the senate would have the tariff bill ready might as well have stayed away. The measure will not be in shape for conference work.

What'll They Do?

And what the returning statesmen will do in the meantime to employ their idle hours—provided the president does not propose industrial legislation—is a question. Not that the house calendar is clear and void of pending bills, but because this is an election year, and being politicians, every one of them, congressmen will not be disposed to assume added responsibility. Muscle Shoals and ship subsidy are two such pending matters which might engage the attention of the house. Not one at the capital believes, however, that consideration of those measures could be effected with any ease. A few farm bloc members, having opposition, may make some reference to the Muscle Shoals proposition in order to help the cause, it is said, but the general membership is not expected to enthuse over the idea—nor the ship subsidy.

Previous announcements of New York's greatest style show had promised "positively"—that the anonymous debutante would "dress around the clock," in full view of the 5,000 people in the interests of the dress-makers' art. And so when the house was darkened for this climax the thousands of diners on the exhibition floor forgot the salad, placed their elbows in the marionette and leaned forward to keep up with the demonstration.

The curtain revealed slowly revealing the dormant damsel surrounded by half a dozen maids. And whisk, she was out of bed and into her dress, her yellow silk nightie transformed by some instantaneous sleight-of-hand into a day-time garment of fine fabric referred to as a "step-in."

ture to ask him about it. Mister Delaney said he was as much disappointed as anyone else, having an artist's interest in pretty clothing. He insisted, however, that this is to be one of the season's styles in things for girls.

Trick Bathing Suit.

The two-in-one piece bathing suit was shown recently—a very tight little thing with a concealed string which you gave a little jerk, letting down a sassy little skirt when the beach patrolman approached. After he passed you jerked—that is the young lady jerked—the string again, whereupon the skirt rolled up like a curtain.

The clinical data concerning this very latest contrivance are but sketchily known. However the young lady just seemed to press a button or throw a lever and her pale yellow nightie with lace all about it became a pale yellow step-in likewise bounded by lace. It is the most baffling nightie problem since the murder of Joe Elwell, when a nightie was found and the district attorney went about asking society ladies if they knew whose it was.

The style show was otherwise as promised, an exhibition of confusingly beautiful suits and dresses and all such as that on sixty shapely mannequins. The show is held in connection with the national merchandise fair which thousands of buyers have come here to patronize. There are more than 600 exhibitors in all lines of department store wares and the first day's business was reported by the secretary as being far beyond the original calculations of the manufacturers. The fair is to be held twice a year henceforth as nearly as possible along the lines of the Lyons fair in France.

GETTING TOGETHER.

Public interest in the country over will be centered in Cleveland, Ohio, today, the occasion being the get-together conference of coal mine operators and mine workers' union officials, called to consider a concrete program designed to bring the coal strike to an end.

Briefly, the plan under consideration provides for the resumption of coal production by the union miners who have been idle on strike since last April 1, under wage scales that were in effect when the strike was called, and for the creation of an advisory commission of inquiry within the coal industry, the personnel of the commission to be approved by the president of the United States.

The plan is essentially predicated upon the principle of arbitration, and its adoption by the conferees would naturally imply an obligation on the part both of the miners and the mine owners to abide by the findings of the proposed commission.

It is understood that the leading spokesmen of both groups have approved it, and for that reason the conference at Cleveland holds out more promise of a speedy termination of the deadlock in the coal industry than anything that has been done or suggested since the strike began.

J. L. Lewis, president of the miners' union, declared upon the eve of the conference that he was "of the opinion that this week will see the end of the bituminous coal controversy," and the fact that the operators have agreed to enter into negotiations upon the basis of the plan under consideration tends materially to strengthen the ground for that opinion and to justify the hope of the general public that the resumption of coal production in union mines will soon be realized.

While the public desires the settlement of the coal controversy on a basis of justice and fair dealing all round, what it is most interested in right now is the production of coal.

From the beginning of the strike more than seventeen weeks ago the reserve supply of coal mined and available for distribution in this country has been constantly growing less and less until it is now fast approaching the vanishing point; which fact, with winter close at hand, is anything but reassuring to the country at large.

Discussing the coal strike situation in a recent issue, The Railway Age said:

"There is going to be a coal shortage. There can be no possible question no matter how soon the coal strike is settled. In fact, it is already here in some parts of the country. The only question is how serious it will become."

This is a true statement of a condition that directly affects every line of business, every industry and every household in the country.

At best, it may mean increased coal prices to consumers, and if the stagnation at the mines is continued much longer it will inevitably mean actual suffering and distress.

Under these perilous circumstances it is to be hoped that each party to the coal mine controversy will subordinate personal advantage and considerations to the public welfare, if that should be necessary, and enter the conference today prepared to make any reasonable concession that may be required in order to terminate this industrial war and reopen the mines.

"Safety week" is scheduled for September. In the meantime, we might practice up on it, so as to make it a success.

There's danger in neglecting to see that your radio is on right. You've got to watch your step in the air these days.

SUCCESSFUL ADVERTISING.

"There is no such thing as an advertising campaign," is the interesting assertion of I. H. Detrich, who has built up an annual business of a million and a quarter in a city of 75,000 inhabitants.

This will, at first blush, seem rather a surprising statement to those who have been accustomed to consider and plan what they were pleased to term "advertising campaigns." Seeking to impress the point that successful advertising must be persistent and continuous, Mr. Detrich makes the following interesting comment in a recent issue of Collier's Weekly:

There is no such thing as an "advertising campaign," unless you want to admit there is such a thing as a "breathing campaign," or a "bathing campaign." You can stop breathing and let the lungs rest, as Stephen Leacock once said, but more of you will soon be at rest than your lungs. Just so with advertising. It goes on all the time; your advertising or your competitor's advertising. You can make a short, special drive in some one city if you are a manufacturer or a retailer, or you can call that a campaign. But to bread-and-butter advertising, which you do for a living, can't be defined by any such limited word.

It is evidently not Mr. Detrich's purpose to decry specialized advertising effort which may be demanded in the case of seasonable goods, or, for other considerations. He seeks, rather, to point out the fallacy that a "short, special drive" can produce anything like permanent or lasting results. Manufacturers of nationally known and popular articles have long since learned this, and their "campaigns," if we may still use the word, are continuous. Some keep the quality idea persistently and briefly before the public, until the consumer becomes, consciously or unconsciously, impressed. This one writer has denominated the "parrot cry,"—force in advertising through constant repetition.

Nor is constant advertising of the right sort effective alone with the consuming public. Of course the quality of the products offered, is of primary consideration. But given goods of worth and value, with well considered advertising back of them, there is no better builder of business confidence anywhere. That the banker is inevitably impressed with it, whether he admits it or not, is forcefully pointed out by President Festus J. Wade, of the Mercantile Trust company, of St. Louis. Here's what Mr. Wade says about it:

Do I believe that a banker considers reputation, as developed by advertising, in extending credit? There probably are bankers who will give a negative answer to this question and believe they are giving the right answer.

But let those bankers be approached by a credit-seeking national advertiser, who has established his name, therefore a market for his goods, and see what happens. In nine cases out of ten the fact that these goods have become a household "buy-word" will be the greatest factor in granting the credit.

The banker himself will have become subconsciously sold on the firm, through its consistent advertising. He will say, "Oh, yes, that's a big house—well known, good reputation," etc., not realizing that it was advertising that did the work.

All that is said of the value of national advertising, may equally be applied to selling in mere limited territory—in states, parts of states, towns and cities. The consistent and persistent advertiser even in the small town where everyone is supposed to know everybody else's business, is usually away and by far more successful than his competitor and neighbor who keeps out of his local newspaper and leaves his business and selling reputation to the mercy only of town gossip.

Successful advertising is rather a plan than a campaign. A plan may be made to fit conditions, and more or less elastic as conditions change in degree or kind; but the idea of continuity is there, and it is continuity in advertising that, properly directed, pays and keeps on paying.

Scientists say the world's drying up in the far Asiatic regions. But, then, there's very little politics there.

Now that you can get the sermon by radio, you can do your snoring at home.

When the weather is reasonable there's always politics enough to make you swear.

Practical Education

The Demand of the Day

To the General Assembly of Georgia: If you make any appropriations for schools or colleges this year, will you please make this suggestion a law. That the head of any high school or college in this state, who shall issue to any student, or graduate of said school or college, a diploma, and that it shall be found that said student is not proficient in shorthand and typewriting, it shall be the duty of the state school commissioner of Georgia to hit the said principal or president of the said school or college, at least one good lick over the head with a meat ax.

I know that this seems like severe punishment, but the case is urgent, and their heads are hard. They have been wasting our money for years, they have been telling us what constituted an education, and managing the thing their own way, and we have children with diplomas who can't write a decent hand, or count out loud or speak grammatically, and who are not qualified to fill any position in the business world.

There is today no tool of trade so essential as shorthand and the ability to properly write a letter on the typewriter. It does not mean that you will have to do it all your life, but it will open up more positions than any other one thing, and every child should be taught these two essentials to all business, especially typewriting.

It puts your boy in the office in touch with the vital things that pertain to the business and if he has ability he will soon get a better position with the firm, for these things open the front door to him. It makes it possible for your daughter to get a position if her husband dies and she has to support herself.

No child in this state goes through a high school on the state's money, and not get these things that today are as essential as the knowledge of the multiplication table.

I am suggesting this with great confidence because I know that Dr. M. M. Parks believes in a practical education for our children and he would know just about how hard a kick to hit with a meat ax.

If you will do this one thing, gentlemen, you will not have served your state in vain.

Georgia and the Tax Muddle

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON

The passage Tuesday by the house, by three votes more than a constitutional requisite, of the so-called income tax bill, severely amended with a view that not only double taxation may be avoided, but with liberal exemptions, has given fresh encouragement to senate advocates of the bill to repeal the equalization law, the view being expressed that with a new or revised tax system in sight the legislature may now well afford to strike the equalization act from the statutes.

In view of the fact that the repeal bill was first passed by the house and that the threatened veto of the governor was very adroitly used in the floor campaign for the income tax law, it is probable that the repeal forces in the senate will attempt a similar program, and endeavor to get that bill passed before the income tax bill is called, expecting, of course, the assistance of at least some of the income tax advocates.

In that event the income tax forces can use the same method successfully worked in the house—that is to hold a threatened veto of the repeal bill above the heads of the repeal forces in order to force a passage of the income tax bill.

This seems to be the program, as it was worked in the house, and in the meantime the whole tax muddle will be thrown into the whirlpool of state politics, and necessarily become the paramount issue in the pending gubernatorial campaign.

The amended income tax bill—far different from the bill as proposed—will be stubbornly fought when it goes before the people for ratification, even should the senate pass it, which is by no means certain.

The original bill, which authorized a reduction of only one mill in the property tax and imposed a general 3 per cent net income tax in addition, was absolutely unthinkable; and the house very wisely modified this proposal for double taxation by providing that any property tax shall be subtracted from any income tax where an individual, firm or corporation shall be required to pay both.

There will be an effort in the senate to so amend that any and all properties returned for taxes shall not be subject to an income tax.

There is a decided school of thought in Georgia that either an income tax should be made the bed-rock of a tax system, or a property or ad valorem tax should be made the bed-rock—and that the two cannot be satisfactorily blended in one tax system.

Many other states have found that to be true. Alabama tried an ad valorem plus an income tax, and the income from the latter did not pay the expense of administering it. South Carolina did the same thing. It has been found that a tax system to be satisfactory must be founded upon either one or the other principles.

There are many good arguments in favor of a personal income tax as the keystone of a revenue system. New York state is a fitting illustration of its success. North Carolina illustrates its success.

But a combined property and income tax, where the property tax remains heavy, as in the case of the bill just passed by the Georgia house, has never yet proved satisfactory and it will not in this state.

The fact is the income tax provision as the house has proposed, counting the enormous extra expense of administration necessary, will not offset the losses that will ensue from the one mill reduction in the ad valorem rate, and yet hundreds of thousands of people, and particularly successful farmers, will be called upon to pay radically increased taxes.

On its face that would appear to be an incongruous statement, but an analysis of the bill will easily prove it. There are hundreds of thousands of acres of idle lands held in Georgia by individuals and corporations residing outside of the state. That is known to be a fact. Eastern syndicates own millions of dollars' worth of south Georgia cut-over lands and north Georgia mineral lands.

These concerns will only have to pay four mills instead of five mills ad valorem under the new bill; and yet the Georgia farmer who makes a net income of a few thousand dollars a year must make up that deficit by paying not only the four mills on his land but 3 per cent on his income, after exempting the land tax value.

—which will be greater by far than his present taxes under any kind of a mathematical calculation.

And yet, the net income to the state will be increased.

These are matters to think about. Changing a tax system around which revolves a state's revenues, and the maintenance of its institutions, is too serious a proposition not to be studied from every angle.

The Georgia system needs to be changed, but it should be done with a system that will distribute taxes and not increase them.

FREEMAN IS FOUND STRICKEN AT POST

G. F. Freeman, employed as night watchman at the Georgia Car and Locomotive plant on Ridge avenue, is at the Grady hospital in a serious condition, following an attack of apoplexy early Tuesday morning while at work.

Mr. Freeman is a brother of J. D. Freeman, a police officer. He was found by officers of the A. D. C. who went out to the plant to investigate when he failed to appear the watchman's clock at 2 o'clock yesterday morning. He was lying on the floor in the office unconscious when found.

At a meeting of the East Side Social and improvement club, J. T. Wall, who is a candidate for the board of education from the eleventh ward, was re-elected president of the club for the twelfth successive time, and T. B. Ryan was re-elected secretary and treasurer for the eleventh successive time.

August 24 was set as the day for the big town-wide political rally to be held at Faith Crossings, at which time all candidates in the city for public office will be invited to speak.

Announcement for councilman from the seventh ward was made Tuesday by John Thomason, of the Thomason Printing company. Mr. Thomason stated the principal planks in his platform was better streets and schools.

He believes that West End needs somebody in council who will do something, he declared, "and if elected I intend to champion that section's cause for better streets and improved school facilities."

IGNORANCE IS FATAL.

In the vacation season, every summer, year after year, be it said to the shame of our boasted popular "education," precious lives are sacrificed because the bystanders in an emergency are ignorant and powerless to apply the simplest first aid at the moment when life hinges on intelligent action. Many a child is rescued from the water after only a brief submersion and then cruelly permitted to die because the rescuer or bystander cannot render effective first aid.

It is necessary to have a system to the property assessments—not leaving them to the mercy of voluntary tax contributions as of old—on a 5 mill ad valorem rate the necessity will certainly not disappear because the state rate may be reduced from 5 to 4 mills.

That is not all—If this so-called income tax bill should ever pass the senate that does not mean the people of Georgia will ratify it at the polls. On the contrary the probabilities are they will not ratify it if submitted in its present shape. Then what? The tax law would remain as it is written in the constitution of today, and if the equalization law is not in the statutes to systematize the assessments and to provide the tax machinery of the state, the gross revenues will be reduced two or three millions a year in spite of all predictions to the contrary—and in spite of all the politicians, who have made this law a football.

The plain fact is the digest for 1922 from 130 counties in Georgia have already been received by the comptroller and they show a falling off of from 2 to 30 per cent in valuations.

The average decrease in assessment valuations this year, city and county, is conservatively estimated at 9 to 10 per cent. This means approximately $500,000 in net ad valorem revenues.

This is under the administration of the tax equalization law. What will it be if there is no such law even if the ad valorem rate is reduced and an income tax is tacked on, as proposed?

There is no doubt of the unpopularity of the law, but it is due to the fact that the law needs strengthening so that its administration shall be more uniform and co-operative in zones.

The fault is not with Commissioner Fullbright. He cannot make appraisements in every county nor is he called upon to do so. The county boards of equalizers do that and one county board can make an assessment at a certain percentage valuation and an abutting county can make it at another. Hence, the charge, and very rightfully so, that there are inequalities in the assessments.

That should be remedied; and Mr. Fullbright, who is as conscientious an official as there is in Georgia, has asked the legislature to strengthen the law, and to amend it so that these causes for complaint may be removed.

Mr. Fullbright has recommended that the equalization law be amended so as to provide for a distribution by the county boards of assessors of any increase that might be required by the state tax commissioner, instead of applying the same at a uniform percentage increase on all of the tax returns for the county.

He has recommended also that this act be amended to meet the decision of the supreme court of the United States in the case of Turner vs. Wade.

He has recommended that a board of tax review be created for the purpose of passing on appeals that might be brought to it by boards of county assessors in case an increase had been ordered upon the tax values of the county, or upon any class of property therein, and to pass upon appeals from public utility corporations in cases where they were dissatisfied with increases in their returns, ordered by the comptroller-general, and that the provision for arbitrating between county boards and the state tax commissioner, and between utility corporations and the comptroller-general be repealed.

If these amendments should be passed instead of the bill being repealed much of the complaint, not born of prejudice, would be removed.

These are matters to think about. Changing a tax system around which revolves a state's revenues, and the maintenance of its institutions, is too serious a proposition not to be studied from every angle.

The Georgia system needs to be changed, but it should be done with a system that will distribute taxes and not increase them.

W. A. TOWNER DIES FROM STONE BLOW BY AGED BROTHER

Gibson, Ga., August 8.—(Special.) Will A. Towner, of near Gibson, died this morning about 4 o'clock from a wound inflicted by his brother, James Towner, last Thursday morning.

The fatal quarrel is said to have grown out of a dispute over the fishing rights of a pond owned jointly by the brothers. The brothers were separated. Will Towner turned to leave the scene, when James Towner, it is said, threw a heavy stone, striking the former on the head, fracturing the skull and causing his death to follow this morning at Rawlings sanitarium at Sandersville.

W. A. Towner was about 65 years of age, leaving a widow and several children. He will be buried Wednesday at Friendship church. James Towner, brother of the slain man, is about 60 years old. Both were good citizens.

VOTERS IN NINTH DECIDE TO BACK KING AND GILLAM

Decision to support the candidacy of Andy R. King for councilman from the ninth ward was voted Tuesday night at a mass meeting of citizens of the North avenue, Linwood avenue and Cleburne avenue section R. F. Herring presided.

The meeting also endorsed the candidacy of W. C. Gillam for school commissioner. Those present decided to join the Ninth Ward Development league, which originated with citizens in Inman Park and ninth ward citizens living across the DeKalb county line.

The league is supporting the candidates endorsed by the meeting Tuesday. The Ninth Ward Development league, which originated with citizens in Inman Park and ninth ward citizens living across the DeKalb county line.

Due to a typographical error in the Tuesday Constitution, the name of the candidate endorsed by the Ninth Ward Development league for the school board was printed W. S. Gillam, when it should have been W. C. Gillam.

BITS OF NEW YORK LIFE

BY O. O. MINTYRE

New York, August 8.—Broadway's my family honor can stop me."

Sirens are always dangerous despite the bantering. And the hard headed man of affairs—the iron-gloved magnate, so-called—is oftentimes the easiest entangled in the siren's skeins.

Oldtimers along Broadway say it is not the confirmed habit of the gilded life who so easily ensnared. It is the thoughtfully serious who rarely follow the primrose pleasures except on the rare occasion of having a fling.

It is for such men that the gleamers lie in wait. As Broadway says, they fall the hardest, and are willing to pay the most. Just now the tea cup gossip is discussing the plight of the scion of one of the proudest New York families—although his forbear was a ferryman generations back.

However, the progenitor planted a family tree, the ramified branches of which today are the smart set. Such stories are generally exaggerated yet there is some basis for the talk that threatens to become a first page scandal.

As the story goes, the New Yorker has been frequenting the skyscraper hide-aways where the most dazzling view of the city is now being held. It was so arranged that he met and fell victim to the seductive wiles of an imported actress, whose rather voluptuous charms created a furore among the aristocrats of the city.

He followed her from Mayfair to Monte Carlo, from South America to Paris, and recently he sailed for London, where the siren is the attraction in all Parisian circles. His wife took the next boat to make one more effort to bring him back to the family hearth. Yet the gossip says the husband told a friend before sailing: "I am making a fool of myself, I know, but the die is cast. Not even

SINGER DELIGHTS RADIO AUDIENCES

Mrs. Charlotte Crumley
Heard in Concert From Station WGM—No
Broadcast at 6.

Radio audiences tuned for Station WGM, The Atlanta Constitution, last night at 9 o'clock were delighted with a program of six numbers by Mrs. Charlotte Crumley, lyric soprano, who is a pupil of Signor E. Volpi. Mrs. Crumley's voice carried far into the ether, according to reports received at Station WGM during the concert and at its conclusion.

Mrs. Crumley's program was arranged especially for reception on the roof of the Capital City club, but the radio entertainment there was postponed for a week due to adverse weather conditions. The program, however, went out to thousands of listeners who enjoyed Mrs. Crumley's numbers to their fullest extent.

Mrs. Crumley is devoting all of her time to learning operatic scores and has accomplished much in this line. One of her feature numbers last night was "Mim's Story," from the opera, "La Bohème." This was one of the best numbers she sang.

Mrs. Crumley has earned a wide reputation through her singing in Atlanta churches.

Her other numbers were "Reveries," by Spontini; "Dawn," by Poulton; "Before You Came," by Scott and "O Promise Me," by Scott and "O Promise Me."

The piano accompaniment for Mrs. Crumley's selections was played by her teacher, Signor Volpi.

Most of the numbers presented by Mrs. Crumley were introduced in Atlanta last night from Station WGM.

The Constitution did not broadcast at 6 o'clock, inasmuch as necessary alterations in the building interfered with the radio equipment.

FIFTEEN MINUTES OF RADIO EACH DAY

BY EDWARD N. JAVIS
Formerly Technical Electrical Expert for United States Government

LESSON No. 115.
The Construction of Vacuum Tubes.
One of the most important parts of the modern radio set is the vacuum tube, which is employed both in transmitting and receiving. It consists essentially of a highly evacuated glass tube in which are inserted three elements known as the plate, grid and filament.

The diagram shows the general construction of a typical vacuum tube used for reception purposes, the upper half of the sketch being in cross-section to show the arrangement of the three elements. In the center is the filament, consisting of an inverted "V" of wire, usually tungsten, sometimes coated with an oxide. Next to the filament and separating it from the plate is the grill-like network of wire in cylindrical spiral form known as the grid, and finally surrounding these two is the cylindrical metal plate.

There are four wires brought through the glass at the base of the tube, two for the filament and one each for the plate and grid. The tube itself is sealed into a cylindrical metal base of standard size on the lower end of which are mounted four prongs or contacts electrically connected to the four wires mentioned above. A pin projecting from the side of the tube at a certain place assures the insertion of the tube into the tube socket in such a way as to have the prongs make contact with the proper contact fingers of the socket.

Transmitting tubes are often made with different size bases or the pin in such a position that transmitting tube sockets can not be used for receiving tubes, thereby preventing accidental damage to the tubes.

The diagram above is that of a receiving tube for detection purposes. The degree of vacuum in receiving tubes affects the plate voltage required for satisfactory operation of the tube, the tubes with higher vacuums requiring the greater voltages. Tubes containing a small amount of air (gas tubes) are often excellent for detection purposes, and usually require about 18 or 20 volts on the plate, while amplifier tubes usually more highly evacuated require 40 volts or more.

The various makes of receiving tubes vary somewhat in details of construction, but they contain essentially the same elements, and they are so built as to be interchangeable in the standard sockets.

In the large-size provision must be made for insulating the elements to withstand voltage up to 2,000 so the construction is slightly different.

The early vacuum tubes for radio detection purposes contained only two elements, namely the plate and the filament, and operated on the valve principle in a manner somewhat similar to the crystal detector. It was found that the insertion of the grid between the plate and filament connected to the receiving circuit so as to receive charges from the aerial allowed modulation of the continuous flow of electrons from filament to plate with a corresponding change in the current flowing in the telephone circuit. The result is that two element tubes are now employed chiefly for rectifying A. C. for the plate circuit of tube transmitters and for charging storage batteries from an A. C. source. ## WGM TO FEATURE ORCHESTRA MUSIC

Two Dance Programs and Piano Numbers by Alma Garrett Ware on Bill Tonight.

Two full hours of real entertainment have been arranged by station WGM, The Atlanta Constitution, for tonight at 6 and 9 o'clock. In the 6 o'clock program Warner's Seven Aces, The Atlanta Constitution orchestra, will have full sway, while in the 9 o'clock program Mrs. Alma Garrett Ware, pianist of rare ability, and the Atlanta Dominoes, playing for a dance at Roseland, will divide time.

All of the entertainers on the program tonight are well known to listeners on station WGM. In Warner's Seven Aces, The Atlanta Constitution orchestra, station WGM presents one of the best dance orchestras in the south. Every evening the aces are heard from The Atlanta Constitution.

For the program tonight B. H. Warner, director of the aces, has arranged a program in which solos and duets are featured.

Mrs. Ware, who has arranged six piano numbers for the 9 o'clock broadcast period from station WGM, scored heavily in her appearance before an Atlanta Constitution program. Mrs. Ware is a teacher of piano and has a wide reputation on account of her splendid technique and the expression with which she plays.

The Atlanta Dominoes, the orchestra which will split time with Mrs. Ware on the 9 o'clock program, plays frequently at Roseland for dances, and has been heard dozens of times lately on station WGM's programs.

Cards and letters have been received by The Constitution telling of the success of the Dominoes in the dance programs. The music is broadcast by special arrangement with Roseland during the dances given there. Request numbers will be played if they are sent to J. E. Lane, care Roseland.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS?

Radio Editor: I have several two-element tubes, but do not know just how to connect them to the circuit. What are the four prongs for, and to what are they connected? Can I use these jacks to control my gramophone?

Connect the upper prong to the plate of your tube, and the lower prong to the positive side of your B battery. The two middle prongs are connected to the primary of your amplifying transformer. Jacks of this type cannot be used to control gramophone.

Any way, it is more desirable in many instances to turn off the filament rheostats when the tubes are not in use, as filament control jacks complicate the circuit to such an extent that they sometimes lower its efficiency.

Radio Editor: I have a DeForest Radiolone outfit with one tube. What do I need to connect it to a loud speaker or horn, a one or a two-step amplifier? Would I need more batteries? I have a six-volt storage battery, and a 22-volt dry battery.

SENATE TO CONSIDER COAL PRIORITY BILL

Senator Denis Fleming introduced in the senate Tuesday morning a resolution calling on Governor Hardwick to appoint at once a committee, as suggested by the government at Washington, to pass on priority claims for steam coal for industrial purposes in Georgia. The resolution was laid on the table for a day under the senate rules and is scheduled to come up for action Wednesday.

A delegation of retail coal dealers of Atlanta called on the governor Tuesday morning to urge speedy action on a resolution already pending in the legislature to create a coal commission to handle the distribution of coal in the state during the coal strike.

Governor Hardwick replied that he was exerting every effort possible to speed up action on the bill, and advised them to present the matter to the senate. As a result the resolution was offered in the senate.

The chemical analysis of the contents of the bottle of soda water that was believed to have caused the death of little 4-year-old James Vernon Johnson, and the serious illness of his father and little sister, showed that it met every requirement of the pure food law, according to Dr. S. Dr. Wilson stated that he found nothing out of the way, and that his visit to the bottling plant revealed no harmful condition or violation of the law. He would not hazard a guess as to what caused the little boy's death.

Extending Highland To Join East Harris Is Fourth Ward Plan

A definite movement to extend Highland westward to join with East Harris street so as to provide a direct route into the center of the city from the Highland avenue section, was begun Tuesday night at a mass meeting of fourth ward citizens held at the office of C. E. Freeman.

Formation of the Fourth Ward Improvement club resulted from the meeting. Henry F. Garrett, its president, was elected to the club's executive committee.

Among those speaking at the meeting in the interest of the Highland avenue project were C. M. Zattan, J. W. White, Dr. Eubanks, E. S. Vickers, J. L. Zachary, and H. G. Keeney.

Anti-pneumonia serum is obtained from the blood of horses.

TRAIN HITS COWS AND BLAZES UP, SCARING PEOPLE

Citizens of Scotland, Ga., were given a thrill early Tuesday morning by flaming freight cars which were derailed, when a freight train of the Southern railway smashed into a herd of cattle on the tracks at this point, according to advices reaching local offices of the road yesterday.

No one was injured, according to the reports, although traffic on the road was tied up for several hours. It is stated, and the telegraph and phone wires were knocked down, the service being temporarily impaired.

Citizens of the town, some clad in their night robes, rushed out to render the train crew aid.

Miss Noel Bufford Goes From The Southern Business College To Position With Important Firm

Seeing the Success of Its Graduates, Many Are Enrolling for Training at the Southern Business University.

A "beaten path" is being made to the doors of the Southern Shorthand and Business University. The success of others is inducing many young men and young women from all parts of the country to enroll for commercial training at this wide-awake and progressive Business school. The mails are bringing many applications for the fall term enrollment. The school's registrar is busy as he can be.

And, while the big school is receiving new pupils daily, the Employment Department is continually supplying firms with good stenographers and bookkeepers.

Miss Noel Bufford was a conscientious pupil of the Southern. She now is ready for her reward. Read her letter, and also the letter written by the firm employing her to the Southern:

"Atlanta, Ga., August 1, 1922.
"Southern Shorthand and Business University, Atlanta, Ga.
"Gentlemen:

"I realize how useless it is for me to try to express my opinion of the Southern in words, and my appreciation of the kindly interest taken in me will always impose upon me a debt of gratitude that cannot be repaid.

"I assure you that I will always look back on the time of my course at your college as four of the happiest months of my life, and think lovingly of my dear teachers there.

"I now have a splendid position with the Scenic Film Company, and although I regret leaving you, I like my work very much, and am doing my very best to make a success in the vocation for which you have fitted me.

"My advice to girls who are thinking of going out into the business world is that, if they want to prepare themselves to prosper and make a success, by all means go to the Southern; I've been there, I know.

"With best wishes to you and the rest of the staff, I remain
"A True Southerner."

"(MISS) NOEL BUFFORD."
The firm employing Miss Bufford is pleased. Read what the manager says:

"Atlanta, Ga., August 1, 1922.
"Southern Shorthand and Business University, Atlanta, Ga.
"Gentlemen:

"It gives me pleasure to state that Miss Noel Bufford, a recent graduate of the Southern Business College, has been employed by us as stenographer and office secretary, and during the time she has been with us has given entire satisfaction.

"Miss Bufford is keenly interested in her duties, and manifests, beyond her natural inclination to do her work properly, a training which, in our estimation, was properly conducted.

Is Your Stomach A Gas Bag?

Don't be a human "blimp." Take Baalman's Gas Tablets and correct the digestive weakness that causes excessive gas to form in your stomach and bowels. You will soon get rid of those pains around your heart. There will be no more palpitation—no difficult breathing—no drowsiness after eating—no nervous, anxious feeling—no bloating—no yawning, empty feeling at the pit of the stomach.

There will be no more gas pressure to restrict circulation and make your hands and feet feel cold and numb. You can eat what you like, without fear, because Baalman's Gas Tablets not only relieve, but prevent stomach distress. They act upon the nerves controlling the process of digestion, gradually helping to build them up and restore their normal activity.

See that you get the genuine Baalman's Gas Tablets in the yellow package. Price one dollar. Sold by Curtis Drug Co., Jackson Drug Co., Chas. A. Smith and all other leading druggists. Baalman, Chemist, San Francisco, Calif.

MAN POSTPONES HIS FUNERAL

"I am 66 years old and for past two years have been suffering so badly from stomach and liver troubles, bloating and colic attacks that I did not expect to live more than a few months and was arranging my affairs and making my funeral. Three weeks ago Mary's Wonderful Remedy have entirely cured me." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Jacobs' Pharmacy and druggists everywhere.—(adv.)

TWO KINDS OF DIGNITY.

Dignity is a fine quality. We may like people who completely lack it, but we do not respect them or have a deep confidence in them.

Dignity is useful. It helps you to keep people at a distance when you want to; it helps an executive handle those who are under him or her. It provides a sort of air cushion between oneself and the people about one which makes for less friction, less crowding in one's contacts with other people.

Self Respect and Reserve.

I suppose true dignity is a combination of self respect, with consideration for others, and that dash of reserve which breeding always inculcates.

But there is another kind of dignity, the kind that we mean when we say a person "stands on his dignity."

In any gathering of people there are always a few who hang back and won't join in any diversion that is proposed, especially if it is a game which requires that one drop any of the stand-on-his-dignity kind of dignity.

They will watch the other people; they will apparently enjoy seeing what others do, but when you approach them for their contribution to the fun, you go away empty-handed.

Never the Goat. It's a game in which someone has to take the position of goat, count them out. They will somehow or other always escape when it comes their turn.

And, as people usually do when they are different from others, they pride themselves on what is nothing more nor less than selfishness.

I think I have done wrong to use the word "dignity" in this connection. The thing which really holds people back at such times isn't dignity at all. I have seen the most dignified people unbend at the right moment. It is rather, I think, a blend of four qualities, a little selfishness, a little laziness, a little self-consciousness, a little self-respect.

The Hanger Back. The man who said: "Everywhere I go there is some man who is the life of the party and how I hate that man," said a witty thing. But just the same, I'll bet he was the kind of man who always hangs back, never starts anything, never is willing to take his turn at being the life of the party.

Tomorrow—Find the Missing Link.

HOW TO SAVE WHEN SHOPPING

By Ruth Leigh

Author of "The Woman of Retail Selling," "The A B C of Retailing," Etc.

Because attractive towels and other linens are a great temptation to exhibit in one's dressing room to the week-end guest, some of us sacrifice appearance to wearing qualities. Others do it unknowingly. Look, for example, at hemstitched sheets, which are undeniably prettier than machine-stitched sheets. Yet hemstitched sheets are much more likely to tear when being washed than sheets with the hem sewn in.

Take the case of towels with fringe: fringed towels are pretty, yes, but you know that fringe is not strong and soon tears off or becomes unsightly. Some housewives like towels with machine scallops. They look pretty when new, but the edges soon become ragged, making the towels look old and unattractive.

If you buy cheap sheets, you buy those woven from yarn made of tow (short flax fibers separated from the line in manufacture). This means that the sheets will not only wear badly, but that they will not even look well after the first washing or two, as tow is composed of short fibers and soon makes the sheets look rough and fuzzy. Not only that, but this type of cheap sheet is exceedingly uncomfortable to sleep on, particularly to one with a sensitive skin.

You know that high-grade linens are made from the line and the poorer grades from the rougher fibers. Good linen has a smooth surface. If it becomes fuzzy when rubbed between the fingers it probably has tow in it or is a cotton mixture.

We eat so many vegetables this time of year that a talk on the subject tomorrow will be useful.

The spectacle of a flaming automobile speeding through the streets of Canaan, N. H., one night recently gave the residents a decided shock. The car, owned by Claude J. Decato, ignited suddenly while it was being filled with gasoline. Decato hopped into the seat and sped away from the tank and other combustible objects in the vicinity. A fire extinguisher put an end to the roamings of the fiery chariot.

"Do go on with your story," she urged Johnston. "What happened after you had—had—"

"I took his horse and wagon and drove off. I didn't know the trails around there but I did know that I wasn't going to take a chance of being seen by any of Dominguez's gang, so I turned off from the road that I remembered led to the railroad station."

Diana nodded. For the second time that day she was exonerated from the cause of tragedy. "It was glorious relief."

"No Hero. Diana nodded. For the second time that day she was exonerated from the cause of tragedy. "It was glorious relief."

"I didn't know whether I ought to say anything or not when I first saw you in your black. It was in the Chicago papers the day I left. A rotten shame. He was a damned nice chap."

"I should be silent, I said. Diana wanted to ask how much of the real truth was in the papers, but she feared the reply, so turning to Dale she said:

"Marjorie left this afternoon for a few days at Pasadena. I had just seen her off when you met me."

Dale looked surprised. "A sudden decision, wasn't it? I saw her yesterday for a brief moment and she said nothing of it."

Diana nodded. She wanted to tell him the whole story but with Johnston present there was no opportunity.

"Steve has been a brick," she said turning to Johnston. "I asked him to look after you and he has been indefatigable in his efforts."

"I say, Dale," Johnston turned to

A Curious Story. Diana and Dale leaned forward and spoke simultaneously.

"Then it was you who killed him?" "My God, did I kill him?" Johnston's voice broke. His shaking hand reached out for his glass and he drank deeply.

"I don't mean to," He looked at them as though they were accusing him. "God knows I didn't. I thought I was only winging him. I struck for his arm."

"The knife went into his heart," said Dale quietly. "Dominguez was arrested for the crime as it was known that the knife was one which he had won in a card game from some Mexican chap a few days before."

A gleam of something like pleasure lighted Johnston's thin white face. "Revenge is sweet, they say, but see here," he leaned forward, "I can't let an innocent man swing for that, no matter how much of a black-guard he may be. I'll have to go and give myself up."

"No need," said Dale soothingly. "Dominguez has skipped. He told Diana he was off to Java. At any rate, they'll never get him. He's too clever to be caught twice."

"Then you think I should—" began Johnston slowly. "Forget all about it," Dale finished the sentence. "It was an accidental killing done in self defense. The only man at whom suspicion points has got clean away. By the way, Diana," he turned to her, "Johnston's story relieves you of all blame. You weren't responsible for the poor devil's death, as you feared."

Diana nodded. For the second time that day she was exonerated from the cause of tragedy. "It was glorious relief."

"Do go on with your story," she urged Johnston. "What happened after you had—had—"

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

Serving Potatoes.

Potatoes should never be served in a covered dish, as they will absorb their own moisture and become soggy.

Clean Pipes. Make a solution of hot soda water once a week and pour down both the sink pipes and the drain pipes in the refrigerator.

A Purifier. Drop the white of an egg in the kettle of soup. It will gather to it all the impurities and when curdled can be removed with a spoon.

A Cooking Don't. Don't decorate everything you cook with a cream sauce. It grows very monotonous and is apt to make a great many things taste alike.

For Immediate Ironing. If you wish to iron clothes as soon as they are dry, sprinkle them with warm water and roll tightly in a damp towel. They will be ready for ironing in 15 minutes.

When Hemstitching. It is a good plan to save the threads pulled from linen and use them for hemstitching. So often it is impossible to get the same shade of cotton, and this will insure a perfect match.

Still Another. "That's all right," smiled Dale. "I'm rejoiced that you've turned up no worse off than you are. A few days rest will set you up all right. Better come up to my rooms now and rest after your journey."

"Yes, you must go," insisted Diana. "I've kept you here too long already. Steve, if you'll call a taxi for me, I'll be ever so grateful. There's, whom Marjorie appointed as my duenna, will be worried at my long absence."

Dale excused himself and went out. Johnston turned to Diana a bit shamefacedly.

"I must cut a pretty sorry figure in your eyes. It hurts me like the devil to realize it."

"But no. Don't think of it," she protested. He shook his head.

"You're just being kind now. I know. And I'd like to have you think of me—well, otherwise. Do you know what I'd do if all this hadn't happened?"

"No. What?" smiled Diana. "When a decent period had elapsed, I'd come around and ask you if it wasn't about time to put aside the widow's weeds and put on the orange blossoms."

Diana was startled but she managed a soft laugh and put out her hand. "As it is, we're going to be good friends, aren't we?"

"I shall be honored," he said slowly. When Dale put Diana into her taxi, he stood on the curb, still holding her hand as though he found it difficult to relinquish it.

"I'd like to see you for a few minutes some time this evening," he said hesitatingly. "Would it be convenient? Or do you think Marjorie wouldn't like to see you in the circumstances?"

"Come, by all means," urged Diana. In spite of the futility of everything, her heart was singing as the taxi whirled her homeward.

AT WOMAN'S WINDOW

BY W. L. GEORGE

MERELY MY HUSBAND.

A title such as this indicates, I suppose, fairly clearly what I want to say. It is extraordinary what a slump in respect takes place any time between a month and a year after the honeymoon. When a young wife, her first rapture over, discovers that the demi-god whom she married is unpunctual at meals, lost in the railroad time table, inclined to take off his collar in her presence on hot nights, and to snore audibly after dinner, she is very upset. Sometimes she decides that she loves him no more. She sighs for the demi-god of old, not realizing that to live with a demi-god would be perfectly awful if one had to keep up to his standards.

Women should not complain because men are merely men, but remember that women are merely women. They should not lose respect for a man because he treats a wife differently from a betrothed. After all the wife is not the betrothed. Why should she be treated in the same way? He is not showing her disrespect, but he is treating her casually, and perhaps she treats him with equal casualness. They are wrong, of course, both of them, for mutual respect is much more important in marriage than during the feverish period of the engagement. It is much safer for a man to sit with his collar off during the engagement than during marriage, because during the engagement they will think that he has such a beautiful neck. It seems to me that married couples should make a persistent study of the appearance which they keep up. That they should cultivate extreme punctuality in appointments. That they should reserve for each other's company, not so much their best clothes as clothes which were best not long ago. There a woman can do no more than a man; if ever she says that this will do since he is merely her husband, she must not be surprised if he does the same.

Dress BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE

Many of the New Frocks Make the Sleeves Carry the Entire Burden of the Trimming.

Paris—If sleeves were of no other use under the sun, conjectured a well-known designer here the other day, they would serve a purpose as providing somewhere to put trimming.

"Women want trimming. They crave it as the savage craves the beads and feathers. So often it mars the beauty and symmetry of the original line. If that trimming can be kept off the body of the frock and put on the sleeves, then the line is saved. So we say that it is smart to wear trimming on the sleeves because it is gathered the comment has been made that sleeves were very elaborate. Usually these trimming-bearing sleeves are long and sometimes full, but even the short sleeve that has been revived during dog days in Paris may serve its purpose.

A frock that somehow reminds one of the belled costume of the medieval jester is shown in the sketch. It is of beige crepe de chine. There are little placons of drawn work with black velvet ribbon run in and out and finished with large gold beads. It is these pendant gold beads that dangle against each other that give the jester look.

There are three of these placons, one in the front below the waist and the others on the sleeves. Of course, the cleverness in this frock is due to the fact that the designer let well enough alone. Your second or third-rate dressmaker would have dangled a bell or two from the skirt and would have had crossings of black velvet ribbon to relieve the severity of the neckline. This is the tendency of the woman who makes her own frocks at home. Then, too, there is always the devout wish to cover imperfect workmanship with an application of trimming.

"Never mind if it does pucker, the trimming will cover it up," is a remark that is still heard in the home sewing room. Unfortunately if one follows the lead of the great French designers, trimming is very seldom so obliging nowadays.

The heads on this frock are gilt, but steel comes to lead at the hour among the substances from which trimmings are made, and steel balls and round steel beads have asserted themselves. One advantage of these metal balls is that when many are hung from velvet ribbon on a will cord they answer the purpose of fringe.

cause we are so anxious only to keep it off the frock."

This sort of reasoning perhaps accounts for the fact that very often the trimming on this beige crepe de chine frock is developed by drawn work sections run with black velvet ribbon finished with gold beads.

Informal Dinner Parties At Capital City Roof

The Tuesday evening dinner-dance was an event of interest at the Capital City club roof and assembled a number of members and their friends for this enjoyable occasion.

Dinner was served at 8 o'clock and music was rendered by the Seven Aces orchestra.

Miss Myra Whitt, of Montgomery, Ala., the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Carhart, was the central figure in a party given by Henry Lyon, and invited to meet her was a group of friends.

A party dining together included Mr. and Mrs. F. M. McKell, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Peters, Colonel and Mrs. M. C. Gray, Zeilner and Mr. and Mrs. George Crandall.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Butters had as their guests Mrs. Ben Noble, Graham Phelan and Louis Leonard. Mr. and Mrs. Casper J. Johnson entertained in compliment to their guest, Mrs. Obie McKenzie Duncan, of Montgomery.

Covers were placed for Mrs. Duncan, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. John O. DuPre, Walter DuBard and Lauren Foreman.

Miss Bernece was a charming four guest.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Chambers had as their guest their mother, Mrs. J. C. Chambers, of South Carolina.

Others present were Mr. and Mrs. John S. Cohen, Mrs. Edward K. Van Winkle, Mr. and Mrs. Berry Collins, Mr. and Mrs. John Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Macon Histed, W. H. Hoffmann, Charles T. Nunnally, Forney Wylie, Baxter Maddox, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Maude and others.

Girl Scouts Troup To Lead Singing At Children's Matinee

The Bluebird troupe of Girl Scouts will lead in the singing of a group of popular and patriotic songs Friday morning at the Howard theater during the boys and girls' performance, accompanied by Organist Lewis. This innovation to the program proved popular last Friday, and will be continued, thereby encouraging the ensemble singing and bringing a new note into these performances. "America" or "The Star-Spangled Banner" will always be sung as a concluding number.

Another innovation, the reading of the picture titles and subtitles, was inaugurated at the last performance, when Mrs. Porter Langston read the titles for the benefit of the very young children. Many children expressed their approval of this, and declared that the pictures were made more interesting when hearing the titles read aloud.

The feature picture to be shown at the Howard Friday morning, "The Valley of the Giants," starring Wallace Reid, will appeal to all ages of children. The story is absorbing from start to finish, and is full of interesting and dramatic situations.

Charles Chaplin will also be seen at this performance. "A Dog's Life" is the title of the play which features this inimitable comedian. In addition, there will be a Chester travelogue.

The program for the Alpha theater Saturday morning, sponsored by the Better Films committee, will be a very full one. The eighth episode of "Captain Kidd," featuring Eddie Polo, will be shown. This is called "Outwitted." In addition, there will be a two-reel western drama, "The Lost Mine," with George Larkins, and a comedy, "The Bell Hop," featuring Larry Semon.

Mrs. Fred Parr and Mrs. C. A. Wallace will assist Mrs. W. P. Lemmon in chaperoning at the Howard, and at the Alpha Mrs. Lemmon will be assisted by Mrs. G. H. Guy.

Children of the Deacons' orphanage will be the guests of the Better Films committee at the Howard Friday morning.

Grove Park P-T. A. Is Entertained

Mrs. C. E. Ritch entertained the members and friends of the Grove Park P-T. A. at a delightful fresco affair, at her suburban home on Elbridge drive, last Friday afternoon.

Assisting were her sisters, Miss Marion and Miss Alma Herring, of Columbus, Ga.

Those present were Mrs. Roger King, Mrs. Will Carmichael, Mrs. Oscar Mills, Mrs. Robert A. Carmichael, Mrs. E. L. Awtry, Mrs. E. H. Turner, Mrs. Fred Foster, Mrs. J. J. Foley, Mrs. J. A. Whitebottom, Mrs. J. C. McMillan, Jr., Mrs. A. J. Ivie, Mrs. J. B. Harkins, of Birmingham, Ala.; Mrs. Lena H. Cox, Miss Hattie Pearl Foster, Miss Julia and Miss Margaret Ritch.

Miss Peeler Weds Paul Johnson

The marriage of Miss Ethel Peeler and Paul Johnson was solemnized Sunday afternoon, at the home of the Rev. Robert H. Lamkin, on Angier avenue. Only a few intimate friends witnessed the ceremony.

After a wedding journey to points of interest in north Georgia, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will be at home at 11 Park avenue.

Metropolitan Club Gives Dance

A pleasant affair of this evening will be the semi-monthly dance of the Metropolitan club, which will be held at Roseland, from 9 to 12 o'clock. Former visitors are cordially invited. Music will be rendered by the Domino orchestra.

Candidates Speak To Women Voters At Luncheon

The Atlanta League of Women Voters, resuming yesterday at the chamber of commerce its weekly luncheons, heard brief talks from four of the candidates in the coming primaries.

The Constitution's Novel-a-Week

The Magnificent Adventure

BY EMERSON HOUGH

Next Week, "The Grand Babylon Hotel"

By Arnold Bennett

Chapter VII.—"Will!" asked Meriwether Lewis. "Which is our river here?"

They stood at the junction of the Yellowstone with the Missouri, and faced one of the first of their great problems. It was spring once more. Three weeks ago the ice had run clear, and they had left their winter quarters among the Mandans.

Early in April the great barge, manned by ten men, had set out down stream, carrying with it the provisions of the expedition. It bore many new things, precious things, things unknown to civilization. As the great barge had started down the river, the Indians, who had come with it, had followed it, and had been joined by cottonwood dugouts laboriously fabricated during the winter months, had started up the river, manned by thirty-one men. With the pick of the original party, there had come but one woman, the girl Sacajawea, with her little baby, born that winter at the Mandan fortress. Sacajawea now had her place in the camp; she and her infant were the pets of all. She sat in the sunlight, her baby in her lap, by her side on an Indian dog, a white which Lewis had found abandoned in an Indian encampment, and which had attached itself to him.

"Which way, Sacajawea?" asked Meriwether Lewis. "What river is this which goes on to the left?" "Him Ro-shone," replied the girl. "My man call him that. No good! Him—big river; and she pointed toward the right-hand stream."

They plodded on now, taking the right-hand stream, with full confidence in their guidance, forgoing on a little every day, between the high banks of the swift river that came down from the great mountains. April passed, and May.

"Soon we see the mountains!" insisted Sacajawea.

And at last, two months out from the Mandans, Lewis looked westward from a little eminence and saw a low, broken line, white in spots, not to be confused with the lesser eminence of the nearby landscape.

After wasting time by taking a wrong route in disregard of the girl's directions, they came to the great falls of the Missouri. It took the party a full month to make the passage. They were worn to the bone by the hard labor, scorched by the sun, and frozen by the winds. At the foot of greater and greater falls they pushed on up the river, and the party, until presently its course bent off to the south again. Sacajawea from time to time pointed out traces of human occupancy. "What does that say?" said she, and pointed to campfires.

At the Beaver Head Rocks—well known to all the Indians—they went into camp once more. "Captains make medicine now," said Sacajawea to her husband.

For once more the captains hesitated. There were many passes, many valleys, many trails. Which was the way? The men grew sulen. They lay in camp for days, sending out parties, feeling out the way; but the experts always came back uncertain. It was Clark who led these scouting parties now, for Lewis was well-nigh broken down in health.

One night, alone, the leader sat by his little fire, thinking, thinking, as so often he did now. This was the wilderness! He had sought it all his life. All his life it had called to him. What had it done for him, after all? Had it taught him to forget? Two years now had passed, and still he saw a face which would not go away. Still there arose before him the same questions whose debate had torn his soul, worn out his body, through these weary months.

"You will be cold, sir," said one of the men solicitously, as he passed on his way to guard-mount. "Shall I fetch your coat?"

Lewis thanked him, and the man brought from his tent the captain's uniform coat, which he had forgotten. "What had it done for him, after all? Had it taught him to forget? Two years now had passed, and still he saw a face which would not go away. Still there arose before him the same questions whose debate had torn his soul, worn out his body, through these weary months."

mounted, all gorgeously clad. The shoshones showed no signs of hostility—Lewis was able to speak gave them assurance.

"McNeal," said Lewis, "go back now across the range, and tell Captain Clark to bring up the men." William Clark had already ordered camp broken and had pushed on after Lewis. He met McNeal coming down, bearing the tidings. Sacajawea ran on ahead in glee. "My people! My people!" she cried.

They were indeed safe now. Sacajawea found her brother, the chief of this band of Shoshones, and was made welcome. She found many friends of her girlhood, who had long mourned her as dead. The girls and younger women laughed and wept in fact as they welcomed her and her baby.

All were now content to lie for a few days at the Shoshone village. A break in the great range, the snow sprang up—they would be footmen no more.

"Which way, Sacajawea?" Meriwether Lewis once more asked the Indian girl.

But now she only shook her head. "Not know," said she. "These my people. They say big river that way. Not know which way."

An Indian, at length admitted that there was a trail leading across the mountains far up to the northward. "We will go north," said Lewis.

They had now a band of fifty horses. Partly mounted, mostly on foot, they set out once more under the guidance of an old Shoshone, who said he knew the way. Charbonneau wanted with him Sacajawea, his wife, so recently reunited to her people. "No," said Sacajawea. "I no go back—I go with the white chief to the water that tastes salt." And it was so ordered.

Mile after mile, day after day, they stumbled toward some point on ahead which none knew except the guide. On the 9th of September, 1805, they stopped at the mouth of a stream coming down from the heights to the west. Their old guide pointed up this valley. "There is a trail," said he, "which comes across here. On the farther side the water runs toward the sunset."

Laboriously, always pressing forward, they ascended the eastern slopes of the great range, crossed the summit, found the clear waters of the west side, and so came to the Clearwater river, leading to the Snake. They were now among the Shoshones. With these they smoked and counseled, and learned that it would be easy for boats to go all the way down to the great river, and then on to the sea. The artisans felt to fashioning dugouts until at length they had transports for their scanty store of goods. By the first week of October they were at the junction of their river with the Snake. Then they came to the Columbia river. Finally they saw many gulls. As to Columbia these birds meant land, to our discoverers they meant the sea. Far below the last Indian village they saw it—rolling in solemn, white-topped waves beyond the bar. Every paddle ceased at its work, and the boats lay tossing on the incoming waves. There was the end of the great trail. Yonder lay the Pacific.

Soon the largest flag left to Lewis and Clark floated by the side of a fire on the wet beach on the north shore of the Columbia. It was now December of the year 1805. Fort Clatsop, as they called their new stockade, was soon in process of erection. While some worked, others hunted. More than one hundred elk and many deer were killed. And having nothing better, they now set to work to tan the hides of elk and deer, and to make new clothing. As to civilized equipment, they had little left.

"We must have a record, Will," said Lewis one day, looking up from his papers. "We must take some chances of the results of our exploration not reaching Washington. Should we be lost among the tribes east of here, perhaps some ship may take that word to Mr. Jefferson."

So now, between them, they formulated that famous announcement to the world, which, one year after their safe arrival home overland, ships brought around by Cape Horn, to advise the world that a transcontinental path had been blazed. This, so soon as they knew their starting date, they signed, and copies were made for posting here and there in such places as naturally would be discovered by any mariners coming in.

All seemed well fed and content, save one—the man on whose shoulders had rested the gravest responsibility. Sacajawea, the Indian girl, would come to him and talk to him. "What for?" she said one day, "what for do you no laff? What for you no eat? What for you all time think, think, think?"

Why did Meriwether Lewis never laugh? Why did he always think, think, think? He was hungry—hungry for food, for the peace of the sky—another gift of manna in the wilderness. Who had brought those mysterious letters? Whoever he was, why did he not bring another? Were they all done—should he never hear from her again?

CHAP. VIII.—The Summons. Meriwether Lewis, alone one morning, sat pondering on these things, as was his wont. He did not at first hear the rap on the door, not the footfall of the man who entered inquiringly. "Yes, Sergeant Ordway?" said he presently, looking up.

Something for you, sir. It seems to be a letter.

"A letter? How could that be?" "That is the puzzle, sir," said Ordway, extending a folded and sealed bit of paper. "We do not know who came. Charbonneau's wife, the Indian woman, found it in the baby's hammock just now. She brought it to me, and I saw it was addressed to you. It must have been overlooked by you some time."

"Possibly—possibly," said Lewis. His face was growing pale. "That is all, I think, sergeant," he added.

Now alone, he turned toward the letter, which lay upon the table. He knew, without one look, that the number scratched in the wax of the seal would be the figure "4." He opened the letter slowly. There fell from it a square of stiff, white paper—all white, he thought, until he turned it over. Then he saw it looking up at him—her face, indeed! It was a little silhouette in black, done in that before the camera, when small portraits were otherwise well-nigh impossible. The artist, skilled as were many in this curious form of portraiture, had done his work well. And now he read the letter, which covered two closely written sheets: "Meriwether Lewis, I said to you that my face should come to you, wherever you might be. This time it has been long—I cannot tell how long. That is for my messenger to determine."

"Figure to yourself what has happened to all my plans and dreams for you. Even I cannot tell of that, because, as I write, it all lies in the future—that future which is the present for you as you sit reading this. All I know is that as you read it my appeal has failed."

sundered by that, if you please, weak as those words seem. And yet something takes your soul to mine. Does it take you, in spite of all, to the wilderness, across all the miles, across all the long and bitter months? "I say to you once more that in all this my demand upon you has not been met."

I shall punish you once more, and say that it was your desire—that you brought this to yourself—that you would have it in the truth of all intervention for you. Moreover, you lay upon you as any secret—I could never wish to hurt you. "They say that men far away in the wilderness sometimes long for the sight of the face of a woman. See, now you have that! I look up at you! What is your impulse? I am alone with you—I am in your hands! treat me, therefore, with honor, I pray you. (Continued Tomorrow.)

Locals Lose First Game 5 to 0—Win Seven-Inning Affair by Score of 18 to 8

Second Game Featured by Long Hitting—Bernsen, Guyon and Connolly Hit Three-Baggers and Home Runs.

Little Rock, Ark., August 8.—(Special.)—The ridiculous coming on the heels of the sublime practically ruined the day for a couple of thousand Little Rock baseball fans who spent the greater part of yesterday afternoon at Kavanaugh field. The Travelers started the afternoon by winning the first game, 5 to 0, but the Crackers won the second, 18 to 8.

All was well for the Travelers as long as John Henry Robinson was pitching but John Henry has reached that state in life when a pitcher is content to win one ball game an afternoon and be retired for the day after pitching nine innings of shut-out ball.

Kid Elberfeld tried three men as pitchers in the second game. Mike Clevenger was first out and also first in. Mike allowed six runs—Mike and his support, for it must be said in his favor that he pitched better ball than the rest of the club played during his term in the box.

Bernsen's Big Wallow. After Mike came "Bromo" Seltz and after "Bromo" came Floyd Brown. Seltz, pitching his first game at Kavanaugh field, did not show a thing that puzzled the Crackers. "Bromo" pitched 'em down the groove and the outfielders snagged 'em—all of them except the one that "Dutch" Bernsen bounced over the right field fence—a stunt that had never been done before in modern times. The ball hit fair, took one bound and cleared the fence in foul territory.

Robinson was in his best anti-Atlanta form in the first game and also in a fine hitting humor himself. He allowed the Crackers only four hits and he hit three for himself. The Reuben drove out clean hits his first three times up, and on his fourth appearance he hit one to left field that Eddie Moore went back and got in time to throw the slow-moving Babe out at first. The Reuben had the Crackers so well under control that only one of them reached second base. Only five got on base at all, one landing safely on an error. The old boy was his own best support, handling seven chances in the field, six for assists and one for a put out.

Manager Bernsen sent the youthful Mr. Hyml into pitch it with the Reuben. At times Hyml pitched real good ball but at other times the Travelers were not much worried by his pitching.

That Second Game. The Crackers got started in the second inning of the second game. Clevenger started his troubles by walking Mayer, first up, and on his second throw he pitched the ball so long that the batter reached first safely. Bernsen lined to center and Hyml pitched the ball to center and the old boy was his own best support, handling seven chances in the field, six for assists and one for a put out.

Atlanta scored three more in the fifth on a base on balls to Moore. James' single and Guyon's home run. A base on balls to Hock and singles by Mayer, Klugman and Moore and James scored three more in the sixth. In the seventh the Crackers got their regulation three on a single by Wano, Hock's error, a sacrifice fly by Klugman, Bernsen's triple and a single by Smith. The Travelers scored two in the fourth on Lapan's single and Connolly's home run. In the sixth Zellers' single and so did Graff and Lapan, Connolly tripled and Schleibner and Boone singled. Mitchell relieved James and the hitting stopped after five runs had been scored.

BRUNS LOSES
NET BATTLE

Asheville, N. C., August 8.—James H. Bruns, of New Orleans, picked as the best to win the southern tennis championship was eliminated in the second round this afternoon at the Biltmore Forest Country club by Ed Pfeiffer, Louisville. Pfeiffer is hardly more than a boy. He won in straight sets, 6-4, 9-7. This was the first big upset of the tournament.

Rain today prevented any matches in the morning, and men's doubles and women's singles and doubles were not started. Bruns' defeat upset the hope of a double and Phelps, Pfeiffer, Owens and Hunt are now considered in the running for the title.

Miss Elizabeth Legendre, of New Orleans, present champion, is the favorite in the women's singles, pairings in which were made today. Berry Grant and Carleton Smith, of Atlanta, and James Bruns and Edmond Phelps, of New Orleans, are entered in men's doubles. Sixteen are entered in the women's singles and thirty-six in the men's doubles. Play in both starts tomorrow afternoon.

In the fourth round matches today Pfeiffer beat Bruns 6-4, 9-7; Frank Owens, of Atlanta, beat H. M. Fontak, of Wakeforest, 6-2.

Entries in Big Motorcycle Races Try Machines at Lakewood Today

Special Preliminary Races
Will Prove Good Feature on Attractive Speed
Card.

Racing bugs of Atlanta—and they are legion—are impatiently marking time until the huge celebration at Lakewood beginning Friday noon and ending at the supper hour the day following, when the grand old mile oval will be turned into a hotbed for motorcycles and riders, each and every one bent upon presenting the most complete lay-out of thrills it has ever been Atlanta's pleasure to see.

Monday was practice day for the speedsters and what they did not do to the dust-covered track is hardly worth the telling. All of the 26 machines that are scheduled to breast at the tape for the great end-of-the-race twenty-four hour titular clash Friday at 5 p. m. were given a few trial spins by their owners, and with a few rare exceptions, everything was reported ready for the grind that thousands of Atlantans have been waiting for.

The terrific pace set by H. P. Buttrick, on the Buttrick special that he himself built expressly for this race, and the speed that Fred Ashcraft conjured out of his Harley Monday, give unmistakable evidence that there will be a battle for blood when these two start their great special match race for the side-car championship of the south, this event being run off in 5-mile heats, beginning at 2 p. m. Friday.

A record for side-car races may fall when they get away in their tance in the 24 hours. With such wonder of the dirt track as Harry Visnor, Daytona Shearin, "Speed" Wolf, Cecil Gray, Jack Hamie, Joe Wilton, Wild Bill Saine and more than a dozen others of equal prominence competing in the seven events, the fans will be furnished a thrill-a-minute, perhaps more.

COOPER WINS IN CIRCUIT

North Randall, Cleveland, Ohio, August 8.—(By the Associated Press.)—Dr. T. L. Cooper, of Dayton, Ohio, won both divisions of the 2-08 class race here this season when his Peter Henley captured the Leader prize, $3,000, feature of today's Grand Circuit racing program at North Randall. It was the only event of the day to be decided in straight heats.

Peter Henley was driven by Harry Stokes and was coupled with Charles Sweet, which won the Edwards pace, for 2-08 class at the July meeting. Today Charles Sweet finished second in the second heat.

With Peter Henley out in the third heat Hal Bee won in a driving finish. The 2-04 pace resulted in a split heat event each of which furnished close finishes except the fourth. That was won by John Henry handily from Tramp Safe.

Only four of the six scheduled events were decided today. The track was left in bad condition by yesterday's rain and it was late before it was worked into condition to permit racing.

It was then decided to put the 2:14 trot and the 3-year-old trot over until tomorrow. The track dried faster, however, and by the time the 2-08 pace was run it was very fast.

Dietrich, which started in the 2:20 trot, was barred from the betting, the horse being unable to establish the gelding's identity to the satisfaction.

Denies Releasing Negro Who Slew Railway Striker

Railroad Special Agent Gives His Version of Escape of Slayer.

Charges that he had released the negro who shot and fatally wounded Fred A. Smith, 60, of 344 Ormond street, Saturday afternoon was Tuesday afternoon branded as false by Special Officer W. D. Scott, of the Georgia railroad, who stated the Alton, Ill. Slapay was either misled by someone, or deliberately and willfully misrepresented the facts himself.

Officer Scott states that no negro, nor any one else, had been pointed out to him by any one as the man who shot Mr. Smith, and claims that the negro, Booker, a striker, was arrested by him for shooting a negro strikebreaker, Allen Pierce, on Edgewood avenue.

When arrested on Cornelia street, about one block from Edgewood avenue, the Booker negro was in pursuit of the two other negroes, Collier White and Lonnie Joe, whom he was threatening with his pistol. Officer Scott stated that he pursued the negroes, and that he shot the negro, Booker, who was claiming he had shot a man on Edgewood avenue.

The investigation by Officer Scott, after arresting Booker, showed that he had first attacked four negroes—Allen Pierce, the wounded man; Morrison Richardson, Collier White and Lonnie Joe, with his gun on Edgewood avenue. After Pierce was wounded, Richardson made his escape in a different direction from that taken by Collier, White and Lonnie Joe, who ran toward Decatur street, on Cornelia street. Booker was pursuing them when arrested, it is claimed.

After arrested Booker had a .32 Colt automatic pistol in his pocket. Officer Scott stated, "He threw it several feet from where he was standing when Mr. Scott asked him if he had a gun, and he shot at him." Booker is a former employee of the Georgia railroad. He is out on a $5,000 bond.

Officer Scott was emphatic in stating that he knew absolutely nothing of the circumstances surrounding the shooting of Mr. Smith, and did not find it out until his arrival at the police station with the negro Booker. He was then told that a white man had been shot.

Mr. Smith, who was a striking employee of the Georgia railroad, was fatally wounded Saturday afternoon at Edgewood avenue and Wadell street during a shooting affray in which, police were told, at least five negroes participated. He was shot twice in the abdomen, dying early Monday morning in the Grady hospital from his wounds.

Booker was arrested at least four blocks from the place where Mr. Smith was shot—three blocks farther west down Edgewood avenue and one block farther on Cornelia street. A attorney Slapay charged that Booker arrested a wounded negro, "Slim," and was holding him when Officer Scott arrived, informing the officer that "Slim" shot Mr. Smith. He further stated that Booker released and Booker held by the officer.

The body of Mr. Smith will be laid to rest in the cemetery Wednesday morning, following funeral services to be held at the chapel of Harry G. Poole at 10 o'clock. Dr. L. O. Bricker will officiate.

Members of the Georgia Shop crafts union; Fulton lodge No. 32, I. O. O. F.; Comanche Tribe No. 6, Red Men; Lebanon lodge No. 655, B. P. O. E.; and two O. G. T. O. lodge No. 334, Brotherhood of Railroad Carmen of America, will form an honorary escort at the funeral.

Besides his wife, two sons, H. L. and C. J. Smith, and two daughters, Miss Victoria Smith and Mrs. C. L. Belcher, survive him. He also leaves a brother and five sisters.

PERSHING APARTMENT PERMITS GRANTED

Permission to erect an eight-story apartment house to cost approximately $500,000 at Pershing point between Peachtree and West Peachtree streets, was granted Tuesday afternoon by the zoning board. Work on the new structure, which has been held up for several weeks because of the existing ordinance, will begin at once, Mr. Duncan stated.

The appeal board, consisting of Councilman Edgar Watkins, R. T. Turner, city electrician and H. Collier, chief of construction, after investigating the application for a permit to erect the apartment house and finding the same in accordance with the ordinance, authorized the permit.

The Pershing point apartments will constitute the finest apartment structure built here since the erection of the Ponce de Leon apartments. The situation is ideal, being highly elevated and affording a splendid view of the city's finest residential section. It is within walking distance of the Peachtree passenger station, the First Presbyterian church and the First Church of Christ Scientists.

Under the zoning law the proposed building, eight stories high, would be too high, and before the permit could be issued approval of the zoning appeal board was necessary.

BLIND CHAPLAIN
FOR HUMPHRIES

A hickory gavel whittled with a pocketknife has been presented to Judge John D. Humphries by Rev. J. W. Watkins, of College Park, blind chaplain of the Georgia senate. Mr. Watkins has been blind for twenty-five years.

BRUNSWICK READY TO GREET SOLONS

Glynn Port Committee Quotes Expert's Report as Favoring Brunswick for State Port Terminals.

Final plans for taking the members of the Georgia legislature on an inspection trip to the port of Brunswick Saturday will be perfected at noon Wednesday, it was announced Tuesday night by Fred Warde, of the Brunswick Board of Trade, who is in charge of the expedition.

Although two-thirds of the members of the two houses have not signed the list signifying their intention to make the trip, it is hoped by the Brunswick people that they will attach their signatures by noon Wednesday. Senator L. R. Akin, of the Fourth district, and Representative Mann, of Glynn, are co-operating in the preparations. A legislative committee has charge of the assignment of berths.

"We are planning to give the members of the legislature as good a time as possible and at the same time intend to show them the advantages our port possesses," Mr. Warde declared.

Cites Experts' Report. Discussing the recent report on the Brunswick harbor prepared for the state harbor commission by Engineer E. W. Cowie, Mr. Warde declared that Mr. Cowie had stated in this report that Brunswick measured up to all standards required for a state port. He said Mr. Cowie's own report showed that it was a question of a site rather than a question of depth of water in transportation facilities which led him to recommend the port of Savannah.

Following is the excerpt from Mr. Cowie's report cited by Mr. Warde: "From the ocean the conditions for a port looked exceedingly good. The location in connection with railway system gave every indication of a successful ocean terminal project."

"Inland and coastal navigation possibilities were worthy of consideration. The city commercial status was good. Construction conditions were found to be excellent."

"Several sites for state terminals were offered. They were inspected and tentative schemes laid down for study and approximate estimate, viz: Schemes A, B, C and D."

"Scheme C" is an exceedingly attractive study. It consists of a basin adjoining the lower portion of the city, with a proposed development to begin with. On the main channel, a bulkhead for liners. Along the basin, facilities for special and general cargoes; and having the inner and bulkhead set apart for a grain storage and handling system. The elevator would have belt conveyors to all berths. There would be transshipment alternating with open berths. There would be a cold storage plant, with ample exhibition auditoriums for inspection and sales.

"Every Essential." "The site offers scope for every essential of a port's requirements."

"The center of the state terminals would be approximately at a distance of only one mile from the center of the city, the city offered the site with rights-of-way, water, police, fire protection, and with additional areas as required for industrial development in connection with port facilities. The test of requirements, and measured up to the standards laid down, and would be worthy of recommendation, if nothing better offered."

"Continuation of Mr. Cowie's report, and except regarding Savannah: "With this site, Savannah offers a situation for the state port terminals, which is unquestionably indorsed. Without this site, Savannah must necessarily be turned aside, and Brunswick recommended."

Shot in Defending His Dog From Toils Of Atlanta's Pound

Lee Hall, colored, of 313 Mangum street, resented the capture of his dog by City Dog Catcher Will Lively early Tuesday night, and drew a pistol on Policeman N. L. Tippen, who happened to be with the dog catcher, and as a result received a bullet in the hip.

Hall was shot by the dog-catcher when he was seen to draw his gun on the officer. The negro was taken to Grady hospital for treatment and afterward to police station. He was charged with pointing a pistol at another.

Signs to Warn Motorists Of Dangers of Highways

W. G. Peebles, Jr., secretary of the Atlanta Motor club, and one of the safety signs the club is placing at dangerous crossings in and around the city. This one has been erected diagonally opposite the residence of Preston S. Arkwright, on Ponce de Leon avenue.

In an effort to increase the safety of life and limb both to motorists and pedestrians, the Atlanta motor club has initiated a plan to supply all the dangerous curves in and about Atlanta with safety signs which are designed to aid the careful motorist to protect himself and to warn the reckless ones of danger.

The signs are to be erected at the rate of about 10 a week, the work going forward as sites are selected. Some crossings that are considered among the most dangerous in the city have already been provided with signs, or will be provided in a few days. Following are the most important places already chosen:

One at West Peachtree and North avenue, on North avenue side. Two at Ponce de Leon and Jackson street, one on Jackson and one on Ponce de Leon. At this intersection, there is a blind wall on the side of Jackson, which is a good macadam surface road and tempting to speeders. One at Ponce de Leon drive and Ponce de Leon road. There is a blind corner here also, on account of hedges and trees. Two accidents occurred here while the signs were being erected.

Two are being placed at Fair street and South Boulevard. Two people were killed here within the last 60 days. One is also being placed at Fair street and Oakland. The signs are to be placed by the club, which is a very dangerous corner, as both roads are concrete and it is impossible to see an approaching car.

One sign will be at Bonaventure and North avenues, and one at North and Linwood. One will be placed in a conspicuous place, at the five points of Moreland, Euclid and McLenore. The signs are to be placed by the club, which is a very dangerous corner, as both roads are concrete and it is impossible to see an approaching car.

Authority for the erection of the signs was granted by the street commission. The chamber of commerce is giving the movement its hearty cooperation, and is aiding in selecting the most dangerous places, which will be attended to first. The signs are of attractive design, the national safety flag colors, green and white, and bear on them the words "DANGER" and "STOP". They are of a durable metal and mounted on 4x4 posts planted firmly in the ground. W. G. Peebles, Jr., secretary of the Atlanta motor club, who has charge of the work, asks that all citizens who commission deferred action on deciding what to do with the case. Landrum claimed he captured the negro, removed a pistol from his pocket, and turned him over to Officer Ginn, and was, therefore, entitled to the reward of $325, charged that Landrum interfered with him while he was attempting to arrest Ogle and also declared Landrum was responsible for the negro's escape.

Walker and Ward claimed the reward of Ogle's capture, stating it was due to their passing in an automobile which ran down the negro, several blocks away that he was again taken into custody.

Reinstatement Patrolman. After several motions were divided for and against reinstatement of Patrolman F. J. Quattlebaum, who was recently suspended on charges of being intoxicated while on duty, the commission voted 9 to 2 to make the officer's suspension 90 days. Motion to discharge the officer was defeated, 6 to 5.

Quattlebaum had already served 81 days' suspension since the charges were preferred against him and was resumed his duties on the force nine days hence. The officer made a statement to the commission in which he denied that he was under the influence of intoxicants, claiming that he had just left the dentist's office where he had 16 teeth extracted at the time he was accused of being intoxicated.

He pleaded for another chance, stating that he was the main support of a widowed mother and six children.

Barbers of Waycross Seek Right to Refuse Non-Union Patronage

Waycross, Ga., August 8.—(Special.)—The hearing on the petition of the barber shop proprietors and employees of the Journeymen Barber's union, asking that the city be enjoined from revoking the licenses of the barbers, opened before Judge J. I. Summerville today. It is likely a decision will be rendered Wednesday.

The petition alleged that the barbers had paid the license fee and that they preferred not to serve non-union employees of the Atlantic Coast Line railroad because they believed that if they served non-union employees they would not get the patronage of the union men who are former employees of the A. C. L. railway.

The alleged that their patronage comes principally from union men and that if they did anything to cause union men not to want to trade with them they would lose money. They further alleged that the action of the mayor was arbitrary, confiscatory and a cause of irreparable damage to the barbers.

M'ELREATH MURDER HEARING POSTPONED

After examining a large number of witnesses in the hope of solving the McElreath murder mystery, the Campbell county grand jury, which began an inquiry into the affair Monday, adjourned Tuesday afternoon until August 15, in order that officers assigned to running down clues may have more time in which to gather information.

Forrest Huggins, wanted on a warrant issued in connection with the death of Homer C. McElreath, was still being sought by the authorities Tuesday. He disappeared last week soon after being detained for a lengthy grilling by Solicitor Boykin with reference to the death of Homer C. McElreath.

The Campbell county grand jury is said to be working on the theory that McElreath was killed by whiskey men because they thought he "knew too much."
